HONG KONG'S SILVER EXPORT BAN PRODUCES BULLISH ELEMENT

FRIDAY LUCKY DAY FOR ITALIANS

IMPORTANT POSITIONS CAPTURED

NEGUS CONFIRMS SUCCESSES

Rome, Yesterday.

Yesterday (Friday) is considered here to have been a particularly lucky day for the Italian army, bringing as it did the capture of important positions on both fronts — Makalle in the north and Gorahai in the south.

Although Makalle was occupied without any fighting worth mentioning the Italian press places its importance from the military and moral standpoints on the same plane as that of Adowa and Adigrat, since it is again a case of the re-capture of a place associated with bitter memories in the previous Italian campaign against Abyssinia.

Gorahai, on the south front, it is stressed, is extremely valuable from the strategic viewpoint, since it is a meeting place of caravan routes from all directions and commands access to the principal wells in this arid district. The possession of Gorahai opens the way to Harrar, it is declared, and enables the Italian troops to avoid further operations in the unhealthy plains.

ITALIAN PLANS FOR NEXT PHASE

CLASH WITH RAS KASSA EXPECTED

ARMY OF 50,000 IN WAY

Rome, Yesterday.

The total Italian casualties since the operations began is one officer killed and four wounded, three other ranks killed and six wounded, and 32 Askaris killed and 71 wounded, with no one taken prisoner.

The capture of Makalle completes what is termed the second stage of a bloodless war. During the third stage the whole territory between the Tekazze, Gheva and

Other cables on Abyssinia will be found on Page 11.

Dubai Rivers (tributaries of the Tekazze) will be cleaned up and annexed. First-class road communications will be established with the front line, including a new road from Makalle to the sea at Marsa Fatma.

In the meantime Italian and Askari hands will sweep the country several miles beyond Makalle, while forward parties of engineers will prepare the roads in advance of the main positions.

NEXT ADVANCE

The next advance, probably equally bloodless, will be as far as

U.S. SUPPORT FOR SANCTIONS

Senator Pope Addresses University Students

Seattle, Washington, Yesterday.

Sanctions were the only method of stopping the Italo-Ethiopian war, declared Senator Pope, addressing the Bureau of International Relations at the University of Washington.

The nations belonging to the League were protecting not only their own interests but those of humanity. He hoped that Congress would give President Roosevelt power to put an embargo on the shipment of all war materials to any nation found to be an aggressor, which would be nothing more or less than co-operation with the League in enforcing sanctions. —Reuter.

ITALIAN PRESS STARTS ATTACK ON HOLLAND

Bitter Resentment Expressed

"SANCTIONS ENEMY NO. 5"

Rome, Yesterday.

The Italian press continues to voice bitter resentment at the countries participating in the sanctions and the Tribune in this connection singles out Holland for acrimonious attack.

Designating her as "Sanctions Enemy No. 5," the paper states that Holland, whose colonies are far too big in comparison with the Dutch motherland, is now attempting to prevent Italy from consolidating her "modest colonial possession in East Africa."

Charging Holland with trying to "shake the solidarity of the Continental gold bloc," the paper goes on to point out that Holland's trade balance with Italy strongly favours the former country, adding that Italy will henceforth discontinue all imports from Holland, especially the imports of Dutch cheese, of which she bought 10,000,000 lire worth during the past eight months. —Trans-Ocean Service.

REPUBLICANS IN GREECE

Arrested Leaders Released

Athens, Yesterday.

The two former Republican Ministers MM. Papanastasiou and Papanastasiou, who a few days before the plebiscite was held in Greece were arrested and transported to the island of Mykenes, arrived at Athens last night.

The newspapers report that several officers of high rank implicated in the March revolt have been set at liberty. —Trans-Ocean Service.

This picture adequately illustrates the difficulties of travel through Ethiopia, even in the so-called dry season. An expedition truck is here being hauled across a stream by a score of natives. Necessity for similar methods in transporting war materials proved a real problem for the Italian forces in their advance on Harrar from Italian Somaliland.

POLITICAL RELATIONS IMPROVING

Prospects Of Lasting Understanding

OPENING OF CONGRESS ASSURED

Nanking, Yesterday.

Messrs. Tai Chi-tao and M. Chao-chun arrived this morning via Nanchang, where they passed the night. Upon their arrival they called on Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and Mr. Wan Ching-wei to submit their report.

Political circles here are most optimistic over the prospects of lasting understanding between Nanking and the South-west. Observers point out that Mr. Chao Lu and several other Southerners are coming here shortly.

REMEMBRANCE DAY SERVICES IN BRITISH CHURCHES

Royalty At Cenotaph Ceremony

KING TO LAY WREATH

London, Yesterday.

Remembrance Sunday will be observed to-morrow, and at all churches services in commemoration of the 17th anniversary of Armistice Day, which will be celebrated on Monday, will be held. In most churches collections will be devoted to further the work of the British Legion in assisting disabled ex-service men and their families.

On Monday the King will attend the Cenotaph ceremony, and the Queen and Duchess of York will witness it from the Government offices. The Prime Minister and representatives of all the political parties will take part in the service, which will be preceded by the laying of a wreath at the foot of the Cenotaph by the King and other members of the royal family.

Throughout the day the public will, as usual, be asked to buy poppies on behalf of the Haig Fund, and 350,000 voluntary sellers will be engaged throughout the country. An effort is being made to exceed the previous record in these sales, with which £524,000 was raised in 1930. Nearly 40,000,000 artificial poppies have been prepared for this purpose. —British Wireless Service.

CHINESE POLICY CONVERGING TO SOVIET RUSSIA?

To Counter Japanese Threats

APPEALS ALSO MADE TO OTHER NATIONS

From Our Own Correspondent.

Canton, Yesterday.

China is likely to enter into closer relations with the Soviet Union owing to the Japanese designs to seize North China and to dominate the economic life of the country.

As Moscow also feels the threat of Japanese expansion, high Chinese officials believe that China and Soviet Russia are facing a common peril and should join together, at least in a defensive alliance to ward off Japanese designs on North China and Siberia.

The difficulty is that such an entente will encourage the Chinese Communists to become more active in the north-western provinces and several districts south of the Yangtze River. The Reds are trying to increase their power by making contact with Russia through the border provinces.

APPEAL TO DERN

When Mr. George H. Dern, United States Secretary of War, recently passed through Canton on his way to Manila to take part in the inauguration ceremonies in the Philippines Commonwealth next Friday, Mr. Hsiao Fu-chen, one of the elder statesmen here, urged through Mr. Dern, that the United States should take a greater interest in political and commercial activities in China.

NEW MAYOR OF PEIPING INDUCTED

SACRIFICE NECESSARY TO FREEDOM

STIRRING CALL TO LEADERS

DANGERS CONFRONTING CHINESE NATION

From Our Own Correspondent.

Canton, Yesterday.

"Be ready to sacrifice," is the warning editorially expressed to-day in the official daily, Ming Pao, which hopes the Kuomintang leaders will awaken to the present dangers confronting the country and do their best to save it.

"Sacrifice is necessary to preserve our freedom and independence," the paper stresses. "No breathing space is possible now. If the leaders are prepared for sacrifice, they will have the support of the people. We will be sacrificed if we are not prepared for the emergency. There is a ray of hope when we are ready for the danger."

Mr. Chou Lou, ranking elder statesman here, left Hong Kong early this morning aboard the s.s. General Pershing en route to Nanking, to take part in the national deliberations. His trip indicates that Canton and Nanking are united to face external pressure and menace.

NEW SILVER POLICY GETS FIRM SUPPORT

BUSINESS MEN'S HELP FOR GOVERNMENT

Nanking, Yesterday.

The new currency policy, as announced recently by the Ministry of Finance, has won the complete confidence and wholehearted support of the Nanking merchants and business men.

At a joint meeting of various local trade unions and guilds, which was held here yesterday afternoon to discuss the new currency policy of the Government, a resolution was adopted to send a telegram to the Ministry of Finance, pledging full support to the new financial measures.

Meanwhile, it was decided that the Ministry should be petitioned to institute the necessary reforms in the Chinese banking system, in order to make it an effective instrument for the promotion of commerce and industry, and to "promote Chinese virtues." —Reuter.

AMERICAN POLICY FACILITATED

DOLLAR RATE LINKED WITH SHANGHAI?

POTENTIAL SUPPLIES OF SILVER CONSIDERABLY CURTAILED

London, Yesterday.

London silver circles regard Hong Kong's ban on silver exports as bullish for silver for the time being, as the action tends considerably to curtail the potential supplies of the white metal.

With India remaining the only free source of supply the pursuit of the American silver policy has been considerably facilitated, though the price of $1.20 can hardly be realised without serious embarrassment to any possible defensive measures by India. It is pointed out that once the American silver objective is reached the demand for the metal will become insignificant.

The opinion is expressed that the Hong Kong dollar will eventually be fixed at about the same value as the Shanghai dollar, and the Hong Kong authorities are therefore expected to watch events in China before coming to a final decision. (The Government decision, announced yesterday, will be found on page 10.)

CONFUSION SUBSIDING IN CANTON

Government Notes Issued

BUSINESS BEING RESUMED

From Our Own Correspondent.

Canton, Yesterday.

The chaos and confusion as a result of Canton's going off the silver standard are subsiding to-day, as Government banknotes are taking the place of 20-cent silver coins as legal tender.

The Provincial Department of Finance to-day circulated 50-cent banknotes, which, together with 10-cent notes, are used as subsidiary "coins."

Other cables on silver will be found on Pages 8, 10, 14, and 20.

No special difficulty is expected in the use of paper money as legal tender, because the issued of the Kwangtung Provincial Bank and the Canton Municipal Bank were freely accepted before Canton went off the silver standard on November 7.

Bank and money shops resumed business this morning. The two Government banks are full of people who want to exchange silver coins for 50-cent and 10-cent notes. The exact amount of silver coins turned in at the Banks is not known, but people do not sell their coins for notes unless they find it necessary, although the Banks give 20 per cent premium. More Government banknotes will be issued to meet the demand. —Reuter.

SAVINGS BANK STORMED

Temporary Suspension In Canton

Canton, Yesterday.

The Savings Department of the General Post Office closed yesterday. Prior to its temporary suspension of business, the building was besieged by people wanting to withdraw their savings, as they could not use what silver cash they had at their homes. As there were not sufficient banknotes available the authorities ordered the suspension of business until the new currency policy has been definitely settled. —Neutral News.

COLONY BAN ON SILVER EXPORT

Gratified Feeling In China

Shanghai, Yesterday.

Official comment is not obtainable, but undoubtedly the Hong Kong ban on silver exports will prove gratifying to the Chinese Government, in view of its effect in curtailing silver smuggling facilities. It will be regarded as additional proof of British goodwill towards China. —Reuter.

NEW CURRENCY POLICY

Appeal to Nanking For Small Notes

Canton, Yesterday.

Support of the Nanking Government's currency control policy and a petition to the Central Government to make arrangements for the immediate issue of 10, 20 and 50 cent banknotes were the decisions made at a recent representative meeting of Kwangtung commercial bureaux and institutions, which was held here at the Commercial Auditorium under the chairmanship of Mr. Au Ping-pu, Commissioner of Finance. —Neutral News.

SHORT STORY

The Charm Against Thirst

By LORD DUNSANY

IT was a warm sunny day, very much," he said. "It keeps you from dying of thirst. I find it handy now and then."

"Come into Moltano's and tell me about it," I said. For there is one thing about Jorkens, and that is that he will always tell you a story. Whether you believe it or not is your own affair. But he is always good for a story. Another thing about him is that he likes to be offered a drink.

If he saw me he has better sight than one would think from the general look of his eyes. Certainly he appeared not to. Instead of any sign of recognition he pulled out the end of his watch-chain and began absently swinging it. As we drew nearer I saw something blue on the watch-chain, some sort of charm flashing round and round. And then we were right opposite each other, within a yard, his eyes still far away from me.

"Hullo, Mr. Jorkens," I said. I never saw a man look more surprised.

"Hullo," he answered. It was quite true. He was. "Taking a walk?" I said. "Ever seen one of these?" he asked, the charm now hanging still at the end of the watch-chain.

I looked at it, a little wavy thing, all blue and shiny; hard stone, but all cut into ripples; and blue, blue, blue, right down into the depths of it. It wasn't turquoise and it wasn't labradorite, and it was too opaque for a gem. I don't know what it was; but I never saw any little ornament that so set you thinking of water.

"No. What is it?" I said. "It's a charm," said Jorkens. "What does it do?" I asked. "Oh, it doesn't do anything amounted to. Might have played that game anywhere. But playing it with the Sahara was like teasing a tiger till it bit you. Teasing a tiger I should say. Only he had such infernal trust in this damned blue stone. And I can't deny it was justified.

"Well, he gets six camels," and I think five Arabs, and starts one day from El Kantara. And there was the desert waiting for him. Of course it has its charm. Who'd go there at all if it hadn't? Its beauty and its serenity; as though it were part of some planet that knows none of our cares. But, for all that, it was waiting for him. And he must have seen it too, if he wasn't a fool. And he wasn't, only that he trusted too much to this damned blue stone. There's a look on the Sahara that I've often seen myself. It isn't anger exactly. It isn't even malice; it's just a quiet, patient, everlasting waiting in the sun for your bones. Well, he must have seen that as he went in from El Kantara.

"He went south for weeks. He went south until the Arabs would go no further, and it was time to turn, charm or no charm. It was one of those Arabs who told me all about it afterwards. If they had let him go any further there would apparently not have been the ghost of a chance of any of them getting back. They hadn't water enough."

"But he was a pioneer by birth, and when charm against thirst was added to that it seemed to have gone to his head, and he went on till they stopped him. Well, a few days after that, on the way back, the Arabs one evening took a pretty serious view of things. They all made up their minds that they couldn't do it. And it was then that Blanders told them about his charm."

"They all looked at it and fidgeted it, and it impressed them enormously. And for the next few days they went on merrily. In fact, they remained in high spirits right up to the time that their camels began to die. After that, when only two camels were left, and only as much water as each man had in a bottle, and there were a hundred miles still to go, no one of any sense would have believed in a charm against thirst. And nobody did but Blanders."

"Well, those camels very soon died; and the evening that they all drank the very last drop of their water, Arabs and Blanders alike, they were still fifty miles from the mountains. The next day they began to see the tips of the crags, and the sight heartened them, and they were sure of water there. Old storms have filled those mountains with water-courses and cut them far out into the desert and, dry though they are, the smooth beds that the torrents have polished are scooped in scores of places into great basins, by boulders that sudden streams have once whirled round and round. In these basins, when they are deep enough, water will lie for months, in fact till the next storm. There would be no missing them if once they could get to the mountains. There would be ten or a dozen such holes in each ravine, with probably a cloud of butterflies hovering above them. But they were fifty miles from the mountains."

"That day they did thirty miles. The crags were clear and looked near. At sunset they turned the colour of peonies, and from that to translucent blue, the blue coming up from below, till all the mountain was sapphire. Blanders felt they were mocking him, so the Arabs say."

"Then night came with those enormous stars that hang above the Sahara, all seeming calmly sure that that little company would die of thirst in the desert. The Arabs believing them, Blanders alone believing in this blue charm. At dawn the mountains went through their tricks again; they leapt out of night into pearly, paled into rose, flashed as they always do into wild rose while you looked at them, and all in a matter of moments were pale brown rock."

"The six men started off with twenty miles to do and the mountains looked very close—close at hand as they do before thunder. And sure enough they had only marched an hour when they saw black rain clouds heavy along the mountains. But not a drop fell in the desert. And soon they heard the thunder from the storm that was lashing those peaks. They watched it for moments of hope, then saw that it was certainly moving away from them, and into the interior of the mountains."

"At some word of despair from Blanders, the Arabs told him that every hollow amongst the crags before him would now be full of water; the first slope they came to would have water in abundance and it was no more than fifteen miles away. These comforted Blanders little. These men accustomed to the rigours of Ramadan could do it; he could not. And yet he clung still to some queer blind faith in the blue stone. A few more miles he struggled on. Certainly he would have lain down and died hours earlier if it had not been for the hope that he got from the stone; and then ten miles from the mountains he gave up. The Arabs pointed to the mountains, now just before them, and to the thunderstorm that was still amongst their peaks. But Blanders could go no further."

"The charm," they said. He who had cheered them on with the tale of the charm was now being cheered by them with his own tale. It shows how low his supply of hope had sunk. "The charm," they said, with parched lips. And at that he did indeed rouse himself. He roused himself and went on for a few more miles, till they got amongst the ravines that ran out from the mountains, the steep, dry, rocky beds of lost streams."

"Here they could no longer go straight, but had to make wide detours until they came to places where they could climb easily down and up the other side. A walk over the flat Sahara was one thing for a man to do on hope and hope alone, but this rough walking was beyond Blanders' powers. If you can go on 'no on,' he said, 'I shall stay and dig here. If I dig deep enough I may find some.'"

"There had certainly been water once: it was a river-bed ten feet deep, with boulders in it the size of sheep, that had been smoothed and rounded like marbles by some old torrent. Most of the bed of it was smooth and polished rock, but there were patches of sand too, and in one of these he began to dig with a knife. Once more the Arabs pointed to the mountains, quite near and drenched with rain, but Blanders knew that he could go no further, and perhaps, for all his despair about his power to walk, he may have had a confidence in the charm greater than we can guess."

"Then the Arabs neither left him nor helped him to dig, but sat down and watched him from the bank with their grey bournouses huddled round them. And there was Blanders digging with a knife, and only this blue stone between him and the knowledge that death from thirst was certain."

Lt. Walter Neville Ronald Knox, R. N., of 11. M. S. Parthian, and his bride, formerly Miss Joan Illingworth, above, leaving St. John's Cathedral under an archway of swords last Friday afternoon. Lt. Knox is the Navy's rugby scrum-half. (King's studio).

"He glanced once at the Arabs' faces, and saw there no flicker of hope that he would find water in that thirsty sand. They were sitting there, parched as he. That look on that faces was a blow to him; and still his faith in the charm kept him working on. Some of the rounded pebbles must have been far bigger than Blanders, huddled there digging. The thunder was rolling further and further off."

"Suddenly the Arabs shouted. Blanders looked up and did not understand. But it would have been too late if he had understood. There never is time on those occasions, when the storms send down the rivers that make those water-courses. It came down round a corner, the old river, the rightful possessor of that water-course, rolling, the boulders along with it like a boy playing marbles. And Blanders was swept away for over a mile. And round his neck on its chain, when they found his body, where Mohammedana carry a verse in a satchel of leather, lay that triumphant amulet."

"And they come down like that?" I said. "I asked the Arabs that," Jorkens replied, "and they told me that they are forbidden by their religion to camp in one of those water-courses, or even to pray there."

He seemed to brood a moment and added bitterly: "That's the way of all those charms."

"Well, anyway," I said, "it's not treating you like that." I felt the remark was lame as soon as I said it, but I was not prepared for the fury of his rejoinder.

"You think because it got me a drink," he exclaimed, "that is is not packed as full of curses as an African witch can pack it. They're all the same, all these charms, spells and mascots that promise so much. All the same. What has it done for me? All that it promises, and then it gets level. Just as it did with Blanders. It's the same with all these bargains; always was. Man is always outwitted."

"What does it do me? Gets me a drink. And what does the drink do? Why, the little devil promises me strength and health, and activity mental and bodily, and a philosophy to face the drift of things, that is so much against me, my boy. And I believe it. I always believe it. And what has it brought me to? Oh, yes, I know what you'd say. It's very good of you, but there it is. And all the devilry in that damned blue stone is as strong as when first it was carved by some black devil in Africa. It will take me the same way as Blanders. Slower, that's all. But what is time to these ancient devils?"

I hardly knew what to say. I was turning over a few phrases of consolation, all equally lame, when Jorkens suddenly smiled.

"Well, we've got on to a pretty gloomy topic," he said. I cannot claim to be a tactful person, and yet sometimes an inner feeling tells me the right thing to do without knowing at all why. It prompted me now.

"Have another drink," I said to that disconsolate figure. "Thank you," said Jorkens, "I will."

"The trouble about thirst," said Jorkens, "is that you never know when it's going to catch you. I don't very often want a drink, but when I do..."

"On a day like this," he said. "I should think a whiskey and soda."

"I expect you're probably right," I said. And I ordered two whiskeys and sodas.

We sat down and they arrived. "You were telling me about that spell," I began.

"Yes," said Jorkens. "Yes. It's a curious thing; but it works, you know. Always did."

"Does it really?" I said. "Yes. You wouldn't think it, you know; but I was almost dying of thirst just now. It's the unexpected warmth, I expect, coming suddenly like this. And I happened to have run out of change; and there it was."

I saw that he was grateful to his little blue charm and not to me; but it was his story I wanted, not his gratitude, so I gently guided him back to it.

"Have you had it long?" I said. "Yes, quite a while," he answered. "I had it from a friend. He died, died practically penniless, and left me his odds and ends. I came by it that way."

"He didn't die of thirst, then," I said. "No, not of thirst," said Jorkens. "It was very curious that he didn't die of thirst, for the whole scene was set for it. Whatever Fates were guiding him must have meant him to die of thirst, but in the end the charm was too strong for them. Yes, it works, damn it. It works."

I made some other of the remarks that may be likened to little dead twigs that one throws down to keep a fire going.

"He got it from a witch in Africa," said Jorkens. "A long, long way up the Nile, where they worship witches. She had a lot of charms for various purposes, and this was to prevent you from ever dying of thirst. My friend Blanders bought this one because he was going northwards for a long trip in the Sahara. And he had been there before, and thirst was what he was afraid of. He showed it me once, and I remember him telling me that she had charms against drowning, and being eaten by crocodiles. But he couldn't take them all, and as he was leaving the Nile, and could swim, he didn't want those two."

"He showed it to me in London when he got back, and almost at once he was off again, and away he went into the Sahara and was never heard of for months."

"What happened to him there?" I threw in another dry twig, while Jorkens sipped his whiskey.

"Well," said Jorkens, "he went in from the north. Took a few camels and men, as he'd done before; and went in as far as he could, and then turned round and came back again. Merely seeing how far he could go with very little to drink. That was what it was. He was very curious that he didn't die of thirst, for the whole scene was set for it. Whatever Fates were guiding him must have meant him to die of thirst, but in the end the charm was too strong for them. Yes, it works, damn it. It works."

In other words, you are going to forget there was ever such a thing as a full skirt, and you will look slender and wand-like.

SKIRT—slim and straight; if cut on the bias, no pleats at all, otherwise an inverted pleat back and front, or a group straight across the front below the knees.

COAT—loose if short, probably with a fur yoke or fur sleeves. Slightly flared, but straight in effect and semi-fitting if long; with a wide belt on a tweed coat, and a good wrap-over with an important collar for town wear.

SLEEVES have changed. Loose fullness between shoulder and wrist on many frocks and coats in the style of a bishop's sleeves; with the old square shoulder line in some of the jackets and short coats.

WAIST-LINES—as you were. Evidently the designers feel that it is as much as their lives are worth to meddle with the waist-line at present. And a very good thing, too.

JACKETS are usually just below hip-length, because anything longer tends to be a little aging. But besides the classic type you will find that there are some with a kind of minor bustle effect at the back.

Frocks are worn with any type of wrap. Capes have by no means gone out. You will find this autumn, though, that some of them have borrowed a "flare-back" effect from the coats. The smartest, especially in fur, are no longer than finger-length, and some of them have an edging of plain cloth which makes them look very new. If you want a tweed cape it can be three-quarter length and can be fastened up the back, with a waist-length opening inside.

How To Make A Smart Pelmet

THERE is no doubt that a well-fitting pelmet makes all the difference to the smart effect of window curtains. Somehow it looks far more professional than a valance and is not really any more difficult to make.

Cut out a pattern in stiff paper and fix it in place at the top of the window frame with drawing pins so that you can see what the finished effect will be. The top and sides should be straight and the lower edge shaped in any simple design you like. It is easier to get both sides alike if you fold the paper in two and cut through both thicknesses at once.

Materials Needed
You will need some pelmet buckram, some easement cloth or poplin for lining and a length of your curtain material. The pelmet must be lined, even if your curtains are unlined, otherwise it will not keep its shape.

Pin the pattern on to the buckram and cut out the shape exactly. Then use the pattern to cut the lining the same size, and finally cut out your pelmet material, allowing $\frac{1}{2}$ in. turning on all edges. Turn the extra material over the edges of the buckram and tack firmly through the three thicknesses. You may have to snip the material in place to make it sit smoothly.

Stitch a galon trimming round the side and lower edges of the pelmet and you may like to use it for a decorative scroll or bow. Finally tack the lining in place, taking a small turning and slipping it all round about $\frac{1}{2}$ in. from the edge.

Press the pelmet lightly before you take out the tacking threads.

Loose jackets with fur sleeves are also popular among the designers. Be fussy about your necklines—either on your frock or on the jacket-jumper which has almost superseded the tuck-in blouse for the autumn. Usually your collar will be high, but having decided that, you then proceed to play with it. If it is loose enough to be draped pull it down under your chin and at the back of your neck with thongs which can be tied in a knot; or it may be rolled back.

If you prefer something really important, have a collar which is high beneath the chin and disappears into the frock on the shoulders. Or do you like a military collar standing up and then diving into a tiny "V" in front? If you want to alternate your neck-line day by day, you can have small revers on either side of a shallow "V" and then tuck a neatly-folded cravat—in a contrasting colour—inside.

little tricks

To prevent lumps in sugar. Store confectioners' and powdered sugar in tightly covered or glass containers. Store brown sugar in a moist place—the bread box serves very well.

To toast almonds. Place whole or chopped nuts in a thin layer in a shallow pan; heat in a moderate oven—350 deg. F.—stirring occasionally until the nuts are a golden brown.

To brown coconut. Spread the coconut in a thin layer in a shallow pan. Bake in a moderate oven—350 deg. F.—until the coconut is golden brown. Stir frequently, for the coconut scorches readily.

To line pans with paper. It is usually sufficient to line pans only on the bottom. Place the pan on a piece of paper to mark the dimensions. Cut a piece of paper which will just fit the bottom of the pan. Grease the pan lightly; press the paper smoothly against the pan. If brown paper is used, grease the upper surface.

Glass bottles or jugs that have become stained can be cleaned with thin slices of raw potato soaked in vinegar. These can be kept and used indefinitely.

KNOW YOUR JOB

In business, real efficiency is worth more than rubies. Find out, but don't ask questions. Be self-confident, but never self-opinionated. Know your job, but don't talk about it. Never indulge in personal quarrels with the girl at the next desk. Don't let your boyfriend ring up too often or hang around too long. Keep your eyes and ears open—but mouths were made to be shut. Dress like a lady—not like the third girl from the end in the second row of the Folies Bergere chorus. Above all, be willing. You're not doing anyone a "favour" by working. After all, you're paid for it.

POLICE RETAIN FOOTBALL LEADERSHIP BY BEATING SAINTS

SKINNER WORRIES LEE WAI-TONG

SOUTH CHINA "A's" soccer supremacy was soundly shaken in their premier League encounter against the Club on the latter's ground yesterday, the champions being fully extended from start to finish of an exciting game, and emerging winners by the very narrow margin of 2 goals to 1.

The Club played confidently from the kick-off, and their speed and determination proved more than the Chinese could cope with in the early stages. With a marksman of Howe's calibre in the centre, the Club would have taken the points, as the majority of the goal-scoring chances throughout the match were theirs, but were thrown away by rank bad shooting by Ernle Strange, and overeagerness by Fowler and Elliott.

JOHNSON FINDS NET THREE TIMES

SAINTS NEGLECT DARKIE LEE

PILE SHINES IN POLICE DEFENCE

The First Division soccer match between St. Joseph's and the Police on the Navy ground, Causeway Bay, ended in a win for the Police by 3 goals to 1.

The football throughout was very uninspiring and lacked the finesse associated with First Division clubs; the combination of the forwards on both sides was sadly lacking, and the game would have been considered dull had not Johnson scored all the Police goals, and his inside forwards Stevens and Green, brightened things up occasionally with clever tackling.

Johnson sent the Police ahead with a perfectly timed shot from 25 yards. Playing the better football, the Police forwards, however, lacked vital combination, and clever feeding by Brittain and Gough was wasted by misjudged kicking.

Many opportunities were placed in the way of Johnson, but his slowness to grasp the situation no doubt saved St. Joseph's from a heavier defeat.

Darkie Lee was quick and clever when he was given the ball, and a little more feeding may have led to a more even game. From one shot by L. Souza, which rebounded off the upright, Lee shot the ball past McCarthy to reduce the arrears.

From a corner kick two minutes before the final whistle, Johnson headed a beautiful goal which Marques had no chance of saving.

C. Pile and Blackburn the Police backs both played very steadily, Pile being responsible for clearing many dangerous shots from Ward and L. Souza.

FUSILIERS BEAT LIGA 4 TO 2

Singleton Scores "Hat-Trick"

A keenly contested Third Division soccer game between the Fusiliers and the Liga Portuguesa on the Valley ground yesterday resulted in a win for the military side by 4 goals to 2. Both sides played excellent football throughout.

The first goal came quite early in the game, C. Santos placing the Portuguese in the lead with a fast shot into the corner after five minutes. Shortly afterwards, however, the Fusiliers brought the score level through Tait. Then Singleton gave the soldiers the lead 8 minutes after the interval, and the soldiers added two further goals in quick succession, both through Singleton.

The Portuguese scored their second goal a few minutes before the final whistle as the result of a breakaway, C. Santos scoring with a well-directed shot.

Rowlands, the Fusiliers' goalkeeper, played an excellent game yesterday against the Recreio, but was powerless to prevent the goal which gave his opponents their victory.

KENEGHAN BREAKS LEG AT SOCCER

ACCIDENT MARS SPARKLING GAME

MARQUES GIVES RECREIO TWO POINTS

A sparkling game was marred early in the second half when Keneghan, the star centre-half of the Fusiliers, had the misfortune to break his right leg during a collision with a Recreio defender.

The Fusiliers had the Recreio half backs and backs on the run for the first 10 minutes, and a check was not put to their aggressiveness until Marques scored a somewhat fortunate goal. Rowlands advanced from his goal to meet Gosano, but, in picking up the ball, it was knocked from his hands, and the waiting Marques netted.

Gomes looked certain to score, and he probably would have done if any other goalkeeper than Rowlands had been between the sticks, for the latter saved miraculously from a powerful shot.

The second half opened with play centring in the sphere of Keneghan, and it was truly delightful to watch his skillful manoeuvres. It was during this period that the unfortunate accident happened which necessitated Keneghan's removal to hospital.

Play was delayed for 15 minutes, and on the resumption was but a mild affair. Most of the attack was done by the Fusiliers, and Talbot, who had dropped back to take the place of Keneghan, tried a number of the fine long drives.

The Recreio pressed towards the end and Rowlands brought off good saves from C. Marques and Castilho. Both the Recreio full backs played a praiseworthy game, but their outstanding member was Rowen. Harrison and Talbot were the best of the Fusilier players.

SAINTS UNLUCKY

Airmen Secure Brace Of Points

In their Third Division football encounter on the railway ground yesterday the Airmen were exceedingly fortunate to defeat St. Joseph's by 3 goals to 1.

Against the run of the play they took the lead through Murray, who scored after 20 minutes, and for the remainder of the first period they were fully extended to hold it.

On resuming, however, they went away with a dash and increased their lead through Allen, and Gregory added the third goal.

From then on the Saints took matters into their hands, but invariably their clever midfield work was spoiled through trying to walk the ball into the net. Eventually Rochoa did reduce the lead.

CHINESE POLICE SUCCEED

Lone Goal Win Over Engineers

In a hard fought encounter the Chinese Police defeated the Engineers yesterday at the Valley by one goal to nil in their Third Division soccer fixture.

Ten minutes after the interval a high centre from the right wing opened the score. Chang Wing Kau receiving at his toe to send in a fast low shot to register the only goal.

TRIBUTE PAID TO LATE MR. JOHNSON

Kowloon Players Wear Black Bands

The improved form shown by Kowloon in the last two league matches was evidently just a flash in the pan, for they were no match for the Lincolns yesterday and lost a very scrappy and one-sided First Division soccer encounter on their own ground by 4 goals to 1.

The Kowloon side turned out in white jerseys, all the players wearing black bands on their arms, prior to the commencement of the game the teams and officials lined up and one minute's silence was observed in token of respect to the late Mr. W. M. Johnston, a very popular member of the Kowloon Football Club Committee, who died yesterday morning.

Just after the game started the troops in the stand again stood up as a mark of respect to the Colonel of the Lincolnshire Regiment, Major-General C. S. Simson, C.B., who, with other Officers of the Regiment, had come to witness the match.

The Lincolns opened the scoring after five minutes play. Baldry centred for Higgins to force Boyes to concede a corner, and, from the resultant kick by Baldry, Higgins headed the ball goalwards for Ridley to deflect it past Boyes.

Kowloon equalised five minutes later, when the ball came in from the right, bounced in front of goal, and before Reid could gather it Oppenheim had charged the ball and the Lincolns' custodian into the net.

UNIVERSITY DISAPPOINT

Owing to the non-appearance of the University, the Second Division soccer encounter between the Athletic and the University had to be cancelled.

Keneghan, above, the Fusiliers' brilliant centre-half, sustained a broken leg as the result of a collision with a Recreio defender in their First Division clash yesterday.

LYEMUN'S GALLANT DISPLAY

NAVY EXTENDED AT VALLEY

BUT WEARMOUTH AND GREY ON THE MARK

A very clean and extremely fast First Division soccer encounter between the Royal Navy and the R. A. Lyemun resulted in a win for the Navy by the narrow margin of 4 goals to 3.

On the general run of play, the winners fully deserved their win, but the Gunners deserve praise for the splendid manner in which they fought back with the odds against them at all times.

A splendid short passing movement between Wearmouth and Grey down the wing resulted in Grey placing the Navy in the lead with a well placed shot from short range. No further score was registered by either side up to the half-time whistle.

About eight minutes after the interval Recreo, working his way through the middle, sent in a fast rising shot and Hayman, the Navy keeper, misjudging the flight of the ball, fumbled, and before he could recover the ball had slipped over his arm into the net.

For a short period following this, the Gunners completely outplayed the Navy, and succeeded in taking the lead through Edmunds.

Wearmouth, who was playing well, then made a fine solo run down the wing and, with a splendid cross-shot, succeeded in bringing the scores level again. Less than five minutes later, Wearmouth netted again from a centre from Doran—a beautiful shot well wide of Durham's reach. The Navy went further ahead after 25 minutes through Grey. A breakaway by the Gunners in the last minute of the game saw them score their third goal, Morton netting from a through pass by Worthington.

NAVY BEATEN BY SOUTH CHINA

Odd Goal Defeat At Causeway Bay

A very keenly fought Second Division soccer encounter between South China and the Navy on the Navy ground, Causeway Bay, yesterday resulted in a win for the former by 4 goals to 3, after being a goal down at half time.

Shakespeare, the sailors' right winger, scored when presented with an open goal, Tsang having run out much too far for safety.

In the second half South China attacked hard, and within five minutes Chan Tak-fai scored with a fast shot from close range. Then came three goals in almost as many minutes. Newman had the misfortune to handle in the area, and Li Wing-on score from the "spot". From the replacement, Chan Tak-fai took the ball quickly forward and shot.

King, stopped the ball but let it roll over his hand into the net. Then McDood, the Navy pivot, sent in a very cleverly judged shot, the ball entering the net immediately beneath the crossbar, just out of reach of Tsang.

Hinder equalised for the Navy with a slow ground shot, and Ip Yun-to scored the final and deciding goal, King again advancing too far from his goal.

KENEGHAN BREAKS HIS LEG

SPARKLING ENCOUNTER MARRED BY ACCIDENT

LYEMUN EXTEND NAVY

THE Police, who have not yet been defeated in the First Division, although they have drawn two of their encounters, retained the leadership of the First Division soccer table with a clear cut victory over St. Joseph's yesterday, while the Fusiliers, who suffered their first defeat of the season at the hands of the Recreio, are still in the runners-up position, three points behind the leaders. A sparkling game was marred by a serious accident to Keneghan, who broke his leg in a collision with a Recreio player.

South China "A," the present League champions, retained their 100 per cent. record when they beat the Club by the odd goal in three, Lee Wai-tong again being conspicuous with two brilliant goals.

Lyemun displayed unexpected form to extend the Navy, their reorganised team scoring three times and only being beaten by the odd goal, while the Lincolns trounced Kowloon by a three goal margin, the latter sustaining their fourth defeat in seven encounters.

In the Second Division, South China displaced the Fusiliers from the runners-up position by unexpectedly defeating the Navy in a close game, while the "Varsity" failed to turn up for their game against the Athletic. The Fusiliers retained their unbeaten record in the Third Division by beating the Liga Portuguesa, while the Railway R.C. sustained their sixth successive defeat in as many games, when they lost to the R.A.M.C.

The Chinese Athletic have not decided yet who they will field for their First Division League football encounter against South China "B" on the Caroline Hill ground this afternoon, but the team will be their strongest possible and a thrilling game is anticipated.

JEAN DALZIEL IN FINE FORM

MARIE SMITH UNSUPPORTED

Very good passing on the part of both forward lines featured the match between the Hong Kong Ladies, holders of the Caer Clark Hockey Cup, and the C.B.A. Ladies, at King's Park yesterday. Although the C.B.A. succeeded in sharing four goals with their opponents, it was clearly obvious that the Island team was the superior side.

Miss J. Dalziel, who led the Hong Kong attack, played very well throughout, scoring both goals. Had it not been for the diligence of the opposing custodian, she would have added more, for she made other fine efforts in addition to the two which were successful.

What was really at fault in the Hong Kong attacking force yesterday was the absence of speed on the part of the two wingers, whose inability to keep with Mrs. Harrop and Miss Dalziel was responsible for the breaking up of many of their movements. Thus Miss B. Hance, the Hong Kong right-half, was a tower of strength to her line.

Miss Best Shines

Prominent in the C.B.A. side was Miss P. Best, their custodian, who made some meritorious saves at times when goals seemed inevitable. Miss M. Bryson, their pivot, also displayed excellent stickwork, and with the assistance of the other two halves kept the forwards well fed with passes.

Miss M. Smith, who netted both their goals, kept the opposing backs continually on the run, and had she received sufficient support from the rest of the forwards she might have managed to give the C.B.A. victory. As it was many of her attempts were frustrated by sheer weight of numbers.

Hong Kong Ladies:—J. Lunson; E. Gray, and G. Swan; B. Hance, M. Bell and C. Ferguson; F. Marah, P. Harrop, J. Dalziel; M. Smalley and B. Hebling.

MISS ADEY'S FINE DEBUT

Scores Four Goals Against Saints

By netting the four goals which her team secured, Miss G. Adey made an auspicious debut in the "Y" Ladies' forward line in the match against St. Andrew's Ladies at King's Park yesterday. Last year's runners-up in the Caer Clark Cup competition failed to score.

Miss Adey uses her stick with machine-like precision and her shooting and passing is sufficiently good to arouse the interest of even the most inebriated spectator. Nevertheless, had it not been for the excellent assistance she received from the other players, Miss O. Dalziel in particular, she would not have been able to achieve the feat.

There was a conspicuous absence of any form of combination on the part of the losers, in whose ranks the custodian, Mrs. R. Rose, was the only one to shine. "Y" Ladies:—W. George; P. McCaw and Mrs. Rod; Mrs. Brown, E. Thomson and Mrs. Henry; O. Dalziel, S. Dalziel, G. Adey, A. Fowler and M. Westcott.

Miss W. Bradbury played instead of Miss Westcott during the latter half.

ARMY TROUNCED AT SOOKUNPOO

WILSON AND BUTCHER SHINE

A FAIRLY good game of rugby was witnessed on the new Sookunpoo military ground yesterday when the Club gained their revenge at the expense of the Army by a goal, a penalty goal and two tries (14 points) to two tries (6 points).

The outstanding features of the game were undoubtedly the excellent displays of Butcher, the Club stand-off half, Wilson, who made his debut as a centre three-quarter, and Bonnar at scrum-half. Wilson scored two very good tries, his later effort being a brilliant piece of handling.

The Army were without the services of Hamilton at the base of the scrum, while both Powell and Hall cried off, but this made very little difference, as the substitutes did exceptionally well under the circumstances.

Rice-Evans and Davies, the two Army centres, played very fine games, especially the latter, who made a welcome return to the game after being confined to hospital, scoring both the Army's tries.

Barry's Good Kicking

One of the many features of the Army's display was the excellent performance of Barry, at full-back. The latter's handling and touch-downing were as good as has been seen for a long time.

Kelshaw, who came into the team on the left-wing in place of Powell, gave a very plucky display in the second half, following a knee injury, when he returned to his position and, hobbling along, sent Davies over for the Army's second try.

Rigg, who played at full-back in the absence of Robertson, the Club skipper, who very sportingly consented to help the Club soccer side against South China "A", gave a grand display, his touch-downing being, as usual, good.

Scott Weak

Scott, the Club's left-centre three-quarter, was in very poor form and attempted too many solo efforts. His handling was weak and his passing ragged, in consequence of which Powell was very rarely given an opportunity to shine.

The forwards on both sides very rarely shone, most of the play being confined to the backs. The heeling in the set scrums was not nearly as good as that in last week's game between the Club and the Navy, although the Club backs saw more of the ball from the loose scrums.

The Club opened the scoring after 10 minutes through a penalty goal for off-side, Scott taking the kick. Not long after the Army were again penalised, but Rigg failed to land a goal. Just before the interval Butcher broke through in a splendid effort and sent a long pass out to Wilson for the centre to cross the Army line for the first try, which Rigg failed to improve upon.

Powell Scores

In the second half the Club went further ahead as a result of a fine passing bout initiated by Butcher, who transferred to Wilson, the latter in turn sending Powell away from a try wide of the posts. Rigg again failed to convert.

As this period Kelshaw was injured as the result of a tackle, but pluckily came on again to send Davies away for the Army's first points, Hutchinson failing with the kick.

Brilliant Effort

Then came one of the finest tries of the game, when Wilson gathered a very low pass while on the run, and dived over the line with three opponents on top of him. Rigg converted.

Just before the end Davies went over for the Army, following a movement originating from a line-out, but Hutchinson failed to add the points.

H.K. LADIES' HOCKEY WIN OVER RECREIO

SCRAPPY GAME AT SOOKUNPOO

MISS STRAHAN SHINE

A very scrappy game of hockey was witnessed on the Sookunpoo ground yesterday, when the Hong Kong Ladies' second string beat the Recreio Ladies' first team by the odd goal in three.

Mrs. Davies, on the Hong Kong Ladies' right-wing, took the ball and centred quite well, while Miss Hance worked hard in the leader's position, but was included to waver at times. Miss John Smalley and Miss Strahan were the pick of the defence.

The Recreio Ladies' attack combined much better than their opponents, but they gained very little ground by their neat passing.

Miss E. Xavier, the captain and centre-half, and the right-wing partnership of Miss B. Remedios and Miss E. Rozario were also good.

The Hong Kong Ladies opened the scoring in the opening-half through Miss Flex, who netted from an oblique angle through a crowd of players, and just before the interval Miss Blackburn scored from the edge of the circle.

In the second half Miss E. Rozario scored with an excellent shot after dribbling from the edge of the circle.

H. K. Ladies:—Miss M. Sleep; Miss E. Strahan and Miss J. Smalley; Mrs. N. Bennett, Miss R. Smalley and Miss K. Moir; Mrs. N. Davies, Miss J. Flex, Miss H. Hance, Miss V. Blackburn and Mrs. W. Waddell. Recreio Ladies:—Miss Z. Barros; Miss O. Botelho and Miss M. Ribeiro; Miss C. Silva, Miss E. Xavier and Miss L. Silva-Netto; Miss B. Remedios, Miss E. Rozario, Miss C. Silva, Miss Y. Pinna and Miss M. Rosa.

Aksum, Holy City Of Ethiopia

Various Legends Of Its Founding

Evidences Still Remaining Of Past Greatness

HAM begot Kush, Kush begot Aethiopia, Aethiopia begot Aksumawi; and the six sons of Aksumawi founded Aksum.

So runs one Abyssinian legend about the Holy City of Abyssinia. It is one legend among many, writes a special correspondent. Another connects Aksum with Makeda, the Queen of Sheba who visited King Solomon.

This is how it happened: Some years after the sons of Aksumawi had founded Aksum it became the home of Angabo, slayer of a famous dragon.

One of Angabo's descendants was the Queen of Sheba. When Menelik, her son by Solomon, was 22 years old he expressed a wish to see the father he had never known. The Queen gave him the ring Solomon had presented to her, and he set out for Jerusalem.

The Ark Of The Covenant Solomon welcomed Menelik royally, tried to persuade him to remain in Jerusalem, and when he declined gave him a retinue of young Jewish nobles to take back with him to Aksum.

The young nobles, however, grieved at the thought of leaving the city where the Ark of the Covenant was. They plotted with Menelik to take the Ark back with them.

The plot succeeded, but Solomon discovered it before Menelik had left Palestinian soil, and sent his army after him. Just as Menelik was about to be overtaken on the shores of the Red Sea the earth opened before him, disclosing an underground passage to Aksum.

When the Ark was brought to Aksum it was placed on the fastness of Dabra Makeda, and 1800 men were appointed to guard it.

There, according to tradition, the Ark still rests.

The tradition is discounted by historians and archaeologists. They say that Aksum was not founded within the first century after the Flood, as it would have been had the sons of Aksumawi founded it; that it did not even exist at the time when the Queen of Sheba reigned over some part of what is now Abyssinia.

Be that as it may, Aksum to the Abyssinian Christians—Moslems and pagans, it is often forgotten, are numerous in Abyssinia—is an ancient ground.

It is a small city to-day, with a population of some 2,000. But in its monoliths and other monuments there is evidence of former greatness.

Most notable of these monuments is the ancient church of Aksum, built, according to the Abyssinian Chronicles, by the Queen of Sheba to enclose the Ark of the Covenant; destroyed by Muhammad Gran, Sultan of Harar, in 1935, rebuilt, with the aid of Portuguese workmen, by King Fasillades in the seventeenth century.

Sanctuary Of Aksum Every European traveller in Abyssinia has been impressed by this church, though some not very favourably. Bruce, the English explorer, described it as a "mean, small building, very ill-kept and full of pigeons' dung."

It is like a fortress, with a flat roof and battlements, and is on a raised platform over a hundred feet long and fifty feet wide. It was built without mortar, of large stones, and is in four sections, each of which is carpeted. For many years it contained the picture of Christ's head crowned with thorns, which was popularly believed to have been painted by St. Luke, and which, it was said, always brought victory to the Abyssinians. This picture is now reputed to be in a church on one of the islands in Lake Tana.

The church of Aksum is the holiest place in the holy city, and for that reason has been in the past a storehouse of treasures as well as a sanctuary for criminals and political offenders.

In times past offenders who could reach the church were lodged in safety in huts close by, after the Flood, as it would have been had the sons of Aksumawi pense of the clergy.

It was because of the large population of criminals and malcontents thus acquired that Aksum eventually ceased to be a royal residence, though up to the time of Menelik II., greatest of Abyssinian rulers, every Abyssinian Emperor was crowned there. Menelik broke the tradition by being crowned at Gondar.

Past Glory Of Aksum The monoliths of Aksum, the tallest of which is 60ft. high and 8ft. wide at the base, have been stated to date back to the same period as the Temple of Baalbek in Syria.

Whether they do is debated by historians. Historians and archaeologists agree, however, that in the first century of the Christian era Aksum was the centre of an important kingdom extending from what is now Abyssinia across the Red Sea and into the Yemen.

Ancient Greek civilisation reached as far South as Aksum, and it was through Aksum that Frumentius in the fourth century introduced Christianity into Abyssinia.

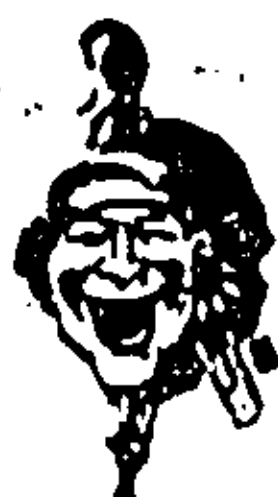

Frumentius was the son of a Greek merchant, was captured by the Aksumites at Adulis, port of Aksum, when a boy, and taken as a slave. He grew up in the service of the King of Aksum, who raised him to the office of treasurer and made him tutor to his son Ezana.

When Ezana came of age, Frumentius was sent to Alexandria, where Athanasius consecrated him first Abyssinian Metropolitan and sent him back to continue the work of conversion to Christianity that he had already begun.

Zenith And Decline Ezana was the greatest of all the rulers of the Aksumite kingdom. In his day Aksum was an important trade centre, and merchants from many lands thronged its streets. He made roads, made caravan tracks safe, and (wisely) looked carefully after the welfare of his soldiers. His exploits were recorded by contemporary scribes in four languages.

After Ezana's reign Aksum began to decline, partly because of its Christianity, which made it a natural enemy of the rising power of Mohammedanism; and in the tenth century Flame of Fire, the Queen of Samen, laid it waste, massacred all the royal princes, and made herself Queen of Abyssinia.

"I have examined many so-called 'difficult' and 'cross' children and could prove that in most instances the children suffered from lack of calcium in the body," writes a well-known specialist.

For irritable Children

In the "Strand Magazine" of March 1933, the well-known food expert, Miss Kathleen Dane, writes:

"Many children of the irritable, nervous type, owe their state to a deficiency of organic salts, particularly calcium, notwithstanding the fact that the dietary appears to be properly balanced. Such youngsters do well when the diet is reinforced by a well-retained mineral food, such as 'Kalzana', which medical men all over the country are now recommending."

Your quickly-growing child needs extra calcium to help the formation of straight bones, healthy teeth, and a strong constitution. Start your boy or girl on a course of Kalzana—you will be surprised at the all-around improvement Kalzana effects. Irritability disappears, appetite returns and soon the formerly "difficult" child will be a happy, healthy youngster again.

ARMISTICE DAY ITS MEMORIES AND ITS LESSONS

FOLLOW THE TEACHINGS OF THE LORD OF LIFE

(By Rev. J. N. LEWIS BRYAN)

AT 11 o'clock to-morrow, for the seventeenth time, there will be a Two Minutes' Silence throughout the British Empire. Throbbing factories will cease their clamour, all restless strife will be hushed, and the fret of human endeavour will give place to that silence which can almost be felt. And silence is a forceful preacher. Back into our minds will come again the remembrance of the sun-kissed, wind-swept cemeteries of France and Flanders, restrained and beautiful in their chaste white dignity, with their myriad white crosses that have withstood the ravages of time. In one almost unbroken line across the world there sleep our "Elder Brethren," who faced the blast of the terrible ones and, having done their duty, now take their reward. The anniversary of the Armistice stands up again as a challenge to our memories and to our common easiness, to reassert our faith.

Renewed Remembrance

Though men never utterly forget, they are sometimes in danger of letting a memory become remote, gentle and sentimental; but on this Day of Remembrance it is impossible to slip into that cowardice. It is impossible to shrug our shoulders and say "Oh well, it was all a very long time ago and what does it matter anyway?"

It matters still tremendously, and it always will, in 50 years' time no less than in ten or 20. Individuals may die, memorials may crumble or become architecturally unfashionable, the names he rubbed off the brass plates in our churches—it was even suggested recently that the words "Lest We Forget" should be removed from one old War relic. Lest it should offend our Continental visitors; but in the consciousness of a people the experience lives on and is renewed again and again.

They Lived Not in Vain

Between to-day and yesterday there is a great gulf fixed and no man may cross it. No man can find again his youth, or hear the laughter of friends who are dead. No man may recapture a companionship which once he knew and lost by death or feel within him again the sudden sick desire, the courage, the fear and the pain that were, for him, the fact of being young.

Yet that he lived and endured and found this knowledge was not in vain. From what the race has known the race takes strength; and all these things which are the experience of individuals are, too, the experience of the race. The heritage which each generation passes on to its successors is not of material things alone, but an amassing of spiritual wisdom and experience. Because many millions of peaceful, timid and amiable citizens fought in a war all over the world for more than four years, because they learned to handle rifles and Lewis guns, and wear battle-bowlers, and be crimed for dirty buttons, and to put on gas-masks, and tell the difference between the various sounds of different shells as they flopped into the mud—mysteriously because of these things, these crazy and cruel experiences—because of much slaughter and much lunacy and much brutality, the people of England are richer and older and wiser.

No Breaking Of Faith

A new generation has grown up since those grim days; those who were young then are coming to middle age. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, yet each spring mysteriously is reborn.

There is a Spring of the spirit and in that Spring, however brief, the divided generations find a deeper unity. They find it in the day of rededication to a service and an ideal which are beyond the accidents of time. The trials of the generations may be different, and the breaking, and the disillusionments, but the faith remains the same.

"We shall not break faith with you who died"—the living swore it because they were brothers with the dead. The bitterness and the pain depart, but the brotherhood remains so long as the spirit does not perish in the people of England.

I am writing these lines in late August, when every paper in England is full of the Italian-Abyssinian crisis. By the time they appear in print, the worst may have happened, and war in all its stark horror and grimness be once more let loose upon the world—a world which we thought had learned a lesson that it would never forget.

A New Spirit

We believed before the War that strife would lead to life. We really expected that out of the dust of battle a better world would inevitably arise. We found to our cost that that way of life was in reality the way of death and led, not to progress, but to chaos. Must we learn that lesson afresh? What the world needs is not new forms of government, nor even a new set of statesmen. These do not control the spirits of men or of nations cursed by the love of power and aggression. The life-giving change must take place in the heart. That is just what the Man of Galilee declared many centuries ago.

He lived in a world nearly as distracted as ours to-day, and because His eyes were clear and pure He saw the truth. He told men that He knew the one secret of life for them and for nations. He showed to those who would listen that force and pride could only destroy, and only love could build a really true life. Yet most of us have dismissed Him as a dreamer. We have put Him on one side, and we went on with our self-assertion, our pride, our greed and our hate. Some of the nations still believe in force and exclusive nationalism, still refuse to abandon revenge and hereditary ill-will.

Is it not time at last to believe the Lord of Life and let Him lead us into a kingdom of love? Shall we choose death rather than life? National greed has blighted the lives of millions already. Do we love it so much that we would rather die than change?

POLICE LOOKING FOR LADY

Victim Of Snatching Attempt

The Police are anxious to communicate with the European lady who gave her name as Mrs. O. Glistler following an attempted bag-snatching incident at Kowloon on Friday.

The incident had a sequel at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday, when Wong Yu was charged before Mr. Wynne-Jones with attempting to snatch the bag from the lady who, however, was not present in Court.

Det. Sgt. Davis, who prosecuted, told the Court that the incident took place in Salisbury Road and a Mr. Davidson who was passing by in his car arrested the man. The lady then gave her name as Mrs. Glistler to Mr. Davidson, who handed the man over to the Police.

Stating that he could not proceed with the case unless the complainant was present, Mr. Wynne-Jones ordered a formal remand until Tuesday morning.

ly was your question?" "I said in 1815, you know, Cheshire Yeomanry." "Er, was there any?" "The question is up to you, not to me." After the meeting had developed much curiosity on the same subject, and every new point was received with shouts of laughter, the candidate promised that if his questioner would call at Tatton Hall the next week he would have looked up the question in detail. The invitation was not accepted. Of course in Scotland the heckling was the main work of a candidate.

THE PASSING HOUR

IT is almost impossible to account for the fact that certain places, men and words seem to acquire a slightly comic "connotation" as the logicians would call it, quite apart from any apparent comic suggestion that could be called intrinsic. There can be no doubt that the name of our Colony comes within this class, and nothing that we could do would make any difference. But what is still more odd is that it seemed to require a comic connection from the first days of its existence. The precursor of the author of "Alice in Wonderland" in the invention of popular nonsense was Edward Lear, whose "Book of Nonsense" was published when our Colony was in its very raw days, about seventy years ago, and one of his nonsense rhymes is as follows:

There was an old man of Hong Kong

Who never did anything wrong;

He lay on his back

With his head in a sack

That innocuous old man of Hong Kong.

The rhyme was printed as a caption to an amusing drawing of a very portly old gentleman, whose figure clearly indicates that he lived before the days of Golf and Cabarets.

HECKLING

THE microphone is evidently having a most revolutionary effect on election meetings during the present political fight in England, as was only to be expected. We hear of one Cabinet Minister addressing a defence of his existence, no doubt very carefully prepared, to an audience of thirty people, and another to twenty seven. And it is not as though these speeches would be reported verbatim in the old style, and read all over the country. The Northcliffe-Beaverbrook Press has killed all that. Speeches are so summarised as to lose all colour, and the average young elector says that "politics is rot". There is after all a good deal of common sense about this, for the local member who made such eloquent promises never had the influence on policy which he was thought to have by his supporters, and it was only after election that his political education began. But there will be a great loss if the good old custom of heckling disappears. At one time every five years or so the local wit had his opportunity, and it was well worth while to go and watch the fun. Most of the stories of hecklers are pretty well worn chestnuts, but there were hundreds of constituencies that had their own "character" or "card" who was no respecter of persons, and it was not at all rare to hear a good question which was quite unanswerable. Nothing could be so unresponsive as a mechanical "loud speaker" which gives to the politician the privilege of assertion without contradiction which used to be the exclusive privilege of the parson.

THE ICONOCLAST

IN the country districts of England it was very common for the candidate to be a young scion of one of the big landed magnates, who would make quite a good member in years to come, but had a good deal to learn. He was set up on a pedestal by his family connections, and there was usually a village iconoclast who would set out to rock the pedestal. I remember once while on a walking tour, dropping in to such a meeting, after listening to a private conversation over the dinner table in which complaints were made that a company of yeomanry recently founded had been allowed to perish of neglect. The elegant candidate on the platform read a rather flowery speech. Then the village wag got up at the back, and said he had a question to ask which he was politely encouraged to do. "What," he said, "about the Cheshire Yeomanry in 1815?" "Ah yes," the candidate replied, "I intended to explain about that, but I regret to say I have mislaid my notes." "That won't do for me, my Lord, I say I want to know what about them." "What exact-

GREAT STORY OF ST. DUNSTAN'S

Annual Report

FASCINATING ACCOUNT OF WORK AND RESULTS

The twentieth annual report of St. Dunstan's for War-blinded Soldiers, Sailors and Airmen, just issued, makes fascinating reading and, though it asks nothing, is in itself a heart-stirring appeal to the sympathy and more active benevolence of those for whom these men, "broken in our wars" and deprived of the precious gift of sight, have suffered.

Twenty Years After

The Report states that more than 60 per cent. of the 2,000 War-blinded men under the care of St. Dunstan's still give "active service" to their country by doing useful work. Others who cannot work, it goes on to add, can be cheerful and courageous—and are. Thus time has vindicated the judgment of Sir Arthur Pearson, the founder of St. Dunstan's, who said twenty years ago that these men must go back to their homes and lead normal lives. "A thousand," the Report adds, "are occupied in home handicrafts; raw materials, supervision and sales being arranged by St. Dunstan's. Two hundred and fifty thousand articles made by War-blinded men were sold by St. Dunstan's last year."

A surprising number have made small businesses out of their handicrafts and have become shopkeepers or small masters employing one or two hands of their own. Over two hundred earn a living in professional pursuits such as massage, telephone operating, and shorthand-typewriting—and there are lawyers, clerks, lecturers, and business men. Two hundred are smallholders or poultry farmers, their responsibilities varying from a few score of prize birds kept as a hobby to many thousands. St. Dunstan's Central Farm and its staff raise stock, supervise, market, teach and help. Of those who cannot do active work, some are retired from active life, and very many are ill or suffer wounds additional to blindness.

St. Dunstan's Imperial War Work. St. Dunstan's has made its own contribution to Empire sentiment. Blinded Canadians, Australians, New Zealanders, and South Africans—all were St. Dunstan's guests for a year or more after the War. They are still under the care of St. Dunstan's or its branches or affiliated organizations. The story of their success is the same as that of the men in the custom of heckling disappears. At one time every five years or so the local wit had his opportunity, and it was well worth while to go and watch the fun. Most of the stories of hecklers are pretty well worn chestnuts, but there were hundreds of constituencies that had their own "character" or "card" who was no respecter of persons, and it was not at all rare to hear a good question which was quite unanswerable. Nothing could be so unresponsive as a mechanical "loud speaker" which gives to the politician the privilege of assertion without contradiction which used to be the exclusive privilege of the parson.

Prince Admires Blinded Men
The title of this year's Annual Report is, "I Admire Your Courage." These words were used by the Prince of Wales when he was addressing a St. Dunstan's Jubilee Reunion at the Royal Albert Hall. He then said he had met St. Dunstan's men in all the corners of the earth and that he was impressed by the way in which they had settled down cheerfully to different lives, anxious to help themselves in every way they could. He ended by saying, "I congratulate St. Dunstan's but most of all I congratulate you. I admire your courage, your resource, and the way in which you have overcome blindness."

ONE-DOLLAR NOTES TO BE ISSUED

that they shall remain permanently in circulation. They are issued as an emergency measure to maintain the supply of currency of a relatively small denomination.

Arrangements have been made to replace them by one-dollar banknotes. As soon as an adequate supply of the latter becomes available it is intended that no more Government one-dollar notes shall be issued and that those in circulation shall be gradually withdrawn therefrom.

General Statement

The following is a general statement of the aims and reasons for which the new legislation is passed:—

The Government have prohibited the export of Hong Kong dollars and silver sub-coin, Mexican dollars and silver bullion (which includes "chopped" dollars) from the Colony. The export of Chinese silver coin, etc., (except to China) is already prohibited.

The Government are also authorising, by Ordinance and Proclamation respectively, the issue of Government $1 notes and of cupro-nickel 10 cent and 5 cent pieces.

The new $1 notes are not intended to replace the existing bank-note issues, but only to replace the dollar coins. These notes are issued as an emergency measure to maintain the supply of currency of a relatively small denomination. They are not intended to remain permanently in circulation, but are to be replaced by $1 banknotes as soon as an adequate supply of the latter, for which arrangements are being made, is available.

Thereafter it is intended that no more Government one-dollar notes shall be issued, and that those in circulation shall be gradually withdrawn. In the meantime the new $1 notes will be freely exchanged into banknotes as well as into the new token coin at the Treasury; at the District Office at Taiipo; and at the following Post Offices:—General Post Office, Kowloon, Yum Kong and Taiipo. A description of the new note is issued herewith:

New Coins

The new coins are struck from the same dies as the old, and are identical with them in design. They all bear the effigy of H.M. King George V and the date 1935.

The new notes are legal tender for the payment of any amount, and the new coin for amounts up to $2.

Stocks of the new notes and sub-coin will be made available during the week end and will be obtainable as follows:—

- Notes from the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation.
- Sub-coins:
 - from the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, the Chartered Bank of India Australia and China, and the Mercantile Bank of India, Limited;
 - In unbroken bags (containing $400 and $125 of 10 cents and 5 cents respectively);

King Victor Emmanuel will take place on Tuesday at 11.30 a.m. We were informed late last night that the reception will be held at the same time and place, but tomorrow, not on Tuesday. POPPY DAY IN COLONY

Tasteful Window Displays

The main show-window of the Ladies' Department of Messrs. Lane, Crawford, Limited, and both the show-windows of Brewster's Book Shop have been set aside for Poppy Day displays, in commemoration of Armistice Day, which will be celebrated in the Colony and throughout the British Empire to-morrow.

In the background of Lane Crawford's display is a model of a Poppy seller, with a tray of poppies suspended round her neck. The most impressive piece of work in this window is the cross, made up of poppies, lying on a strip of artificial green foliage.

In each of Brewster's show windows are a steel helmet and a bayonet lying in a corner. In the windows, which are also decorated with poppies, are poppy dolls, which will be sold to the highest bidders.

SERVICES' WHIST DRIVE

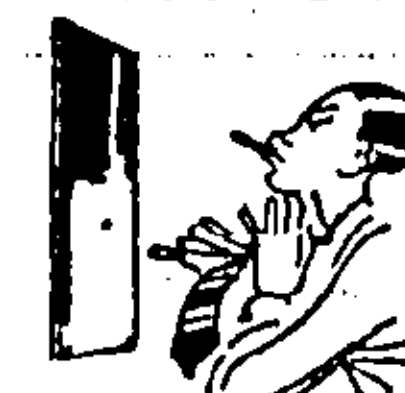

An ordinary Services' Whist Drive will be held in the European Y.M.C.A. to-morrow night, and not a solo whist drive as has been previously stated.

PREPARED DRUG CONCEALED IN SAUSAGE SKINS

Woman Heavily Fined

SERVANT VANISHES
FROM SCENE

At the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday, Tang Oi-ching, spinner, was charged before Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones with having in her possession, at the Railway Station, Kowloon, on November 6, 40 tins of prepared opium. It was stated that the contraband was concealed in sausage skins in a biscuit tin. Revenue Officer Grimmitt appeared for the prosecution while Mr. Sydney Ng Quinn was for the defence. Mr. Quinn asked for a remand, but this was refused on the grounds that defendant had plenty of time in which to engage a solicitor. Mr. Quinn told the Court that he was only instructed late on Friday evening but as his application was not granted, he asked leave to withdraw from the case.

Baggage Searched
In giving an outline of the case, R. O. Grimmitt said that the defendant was arrested when she came off the Canton train at 6.05 p.m. on the day in question. She raised no objections when her baggage was searched, but when she was asked to open the biscuit tin by a Chinese Revenue Officer, she made a lot of noise which attracted R. O. Major to the scene. After some argument

LOCAL NEWS BREVITIES

The number of emigrants leaving the Colony for the Straits Settlements during the month of October was 8,403.

His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government has decreed that the Dangerous Drugs Ordinance, 1935, will come into operation on January 1, 1936.

Mr. Horace Morgan Miller has been appointed a member of the Pilotage Board of Examiners, with effect from October 31, 1935.

The Consul General for Italy, Signor A. Bianconi, will hold a reception at the Consular Office Exchange Building, from 11.30 a.m. to 12.30 p.m. on Tuesday next, in celebration of the birthday of His Majesty King Victor Emanuel.

The U.S.S. Sacramento arrived yesterday morning, and the Japanese gunboat Saga sailed for Canton yesterday morning.

The latter tipped over the tin when the contraband, in five sausage skins, was found at the bottom of it.

Corroborative evidence was given by R. O. Major and a Chinese Revenue Officer, after which defendant went into the box, where she stated that the drug did not belong to her. The tin of biscuits, she said, belonged to her amah who disappeared when the search was being made.

She was fined $3,000 or 8 months in default.

Defendant (addressing the Bench): May I appeal against your decision?—Yes.

Armistice Day, 1935

By R. ELLIS ROBERTS

[Epitaph by the late Dr. Hicks, Bishop of Lincoln, for his son killed in action: "He fought for peace, and found it."]

For two minutes, once a year, can we remember,
While the tumult of our business is broken,
What it was we worshipped in that far November,
When the guns still'd, and the lovely word was spoken?

There was hope in our hearts, and desire and a fierce compassion
For all who had fought and suffer'd and died in pain;
Here was a new world, to be made in a new fashion:
The hate of nations was over, slain by those slain.

Now millions of dead surround us, wondering, longing
For the world we promised them then; and we turn aside:
New troubles, old hates, new fears, old doubts are thronging;
We lose our vision of that for which they died.

Our faith has grown dim, our loyalty uncertain;
With eyes shame-fast to the earth we will not look up.
Did we look, we should see, as All Hallow's part the curtain,
The Pierced Hands offer still the common Cup;

In the Silence we should see it: splendid, golden
Once more in that hush'd heaven we should see, astounded,
Ashamed, the truth from our noisy world-withholden:
We should hear the Dead whisper: "We fought for Peace, and found it."

Silver As A Commodity

WHEN all due allowance has been made for the difficulties of the moment in the adjustment of the silver half of the world to a new system, and the peculiar requirements of a centre which relies on its entrepot trade with the disturbed communities, the Hong Kong public still has a justified grouse that it is never taken into the confidence of the powers that be. It was only with much trouble that it was possible to get a copy of the Currency Commission's Report, and only then from London. It appeared to those who did read it to make some well-founded criticisms on our system—at any rate the local press was of that opinion. If any of the recommendations were adopted, we were not told so, nor were we told why others were ignored. In this matter the public has been very reasonable, recognising the intricacy of the subject and the chances of unforeseen events that might alter the whole situation. But the events have occurred, and it has been shown that under the plan adopted it has become impossible to do business. It is therefore quite a fair request that our Government should make a full statement of their policy. We are more than a little tired of the formula that "Government is watching the situation very closely." That we never doubted. So are we. The amount of the Government's balance is at stake. What is at stake with the public is bread and butter.

In considering the prospects of China making a success of the new policy, one item should not be overlooked—the long history of the tael. It is not literally true that there never was such a thing as a coin called a tael, for there are some specimens kept as curiosities by a few of the old-established firms, even in Hong Kong. But it is true that the tael continued to be a standard of value long after it had disappeared out of ordinary circulation, in fact, efforts to substitute the yuan were never completely successful. The inland currencies were exchanged by the money-lenders in accordance with their ratio of silver content to the traditional tael, otherwise it would not have been possible for the various provinces to do business with each other. That amounted in effect to exactly what Mr. Maynard Keynes and the other most up-to-date economists are aiming at for the world: it is what Mr. Morgenthau would call de facto stabilisation.

It matters not whether we take the market price of a gold bar, or of a silver bar—there will always be a definite ratio between them. What we want is to have a paper currency in each country that can be brought into relationship with that standard by a simple arithmetical sum, and that we shall not be compelled to go into the market ourselves and buy the metal after it has been cornered by a combination of speculators and timid hoarders. The Bank of England still states its reserves in terms of the pound as equal to just under one-fifth of an ounce of gold, although sovereigns are no longer in circulation. It is, in effect, a conventional yardstick influencing men's calculations by dint of its long supremacy. Nothing would be easier than to have an international standard bar of given weight and fineness fixed by agreement, without implying that creditors should be able to demand the metal itself. The value of the notes issued by each country would be very quickly influenced by any inflationary issue of paper not represented by goods or foreign credit accounts. Reserves of metal could be kept by Treasuries and Banks for sale in open market when advisable.

China, of course, has exactly the same problem within its own boundaries as the world outside has to meet, and the method of solution should be the same. Nanking, now followed by Canton, has set out on the right road. There is no reason to follow the disgruntled financiers of Tokyo, who have had their chance of helping and have refused to give a hand, in foreboding failure; but neither is there any reason to conceal that a managed currency requires a much higher degree both of skill and self-restraint than one that is based on a precious metal. The sort of danger that will occur was indicated even in the original announcement, which coupled the balancing of the national budget with the abandonment of silver. The notes turned out by a printing press take their value from the credit of the printing Government, and a balanced budget is the main condition of sound credit; but the balance must not be obtained by the printing operation. That can only be used once, and only for a short time. It is very likely that at the beginning the printing operation will be kept too busy; and it will be very difficult to stop. Strict collection of revenue, and economy in spending it, are so much more strenuous than the issue of an order to the printer, but the foreign exchange will indicate when there is too much paper being issued. After all, the silver dollar itself was no substitute for the moral rigour required by good finance.

Hong Kong Personalities

MR. J. H. RUTTONJEE

This is the sixty-seventh of the exclusive series of sketches of leading Colony residents by Mr. A. S. Kony, the talented Hungarian artist.

OUR Personality this week is Mr. J. H. Ruttonjee, proprietor of the firm of H. Ruttonjee and Sons, who has been closely connected with the business life of the Colony for the past 23 years.

Born at Bulsar, India, in 1880, Mr. Ruttonjee came to Hong Kong at the age of 12 and was entered as a pupil at the Victoria English School, Caine Road, of which Mr. W. D. Bradwood was then Principal. At the age of 18 he joined his father in business. The firm of H. Ruttonjee and Son was established in 1884 by his father, Mr. H. Ruttonjee, J.P., who retired some years ago. The business was at first that of dealers in provisions as well as wines and spirits, but for many years now has been confined to wines and spirits, in which line it occupies one of the leading positions in the Far East.

Mr. Ruttonjee had long felt that there was an opening in Hong Kong for a brewery producing a beer of first quality and, after years of work to that end, at last had the pleasure of seeing the formation of the Hong Kong Brewers and Distillers, Ltd., of which he is Managing Director.

One of the largest property owners in Hong Kong, he has recently incorporated under the title of Ruttonjee Estates Ltd.

Mr. Ruttonjee is one of those who "do good by stealth and blush to find it fame." His benefactions are many and varied, but he does not talk about them.

ONE-DOLLAR NOTES TO BE ISSUED TEMPORARY MEASURE BY GOVERNMENT TO MAINTAIN SUPPLY OF SMALL CURRENCY DENOMINATIONS

At an extraordinary meeting of the Legislative Council yesterday, the Government prohibited the export of Hong Kong dollars, and silver sub-coin, Mexican dollars and silver bullion (including "chopped" dollars) from the Colony, to be effective from noon yesterday.

At the same time, by Ordinance and Proclamation, the Government authorised the issue and re-issue of Government $1 notes and of cupro-nickel 10 cent and 5 cent pieces.

This is an emergency measure to maintain the supply of currency of relatively small denominations. The notes are not intended to replace existing bank-note issues, but only to replace the dollar coins.

His Excellency, the Officer Administering the Government, Sir Thomas Southorn, presided, and there were also present: His Excellency the Acting General Officer Commanding the troops, Major-General W. M. Thackeray.

The Colonial Secretary, the Hon. Mr. D. W. Trautman. The Attorney General, the Hon. Mr. C. G. Alabaster. The Secretary for Chinese Affairs, the Hon. Mr. N. L. Smith.

The Colonial Treasurer, the Hon. Mr. E. Taylor. Hon. Commander G. F. Hole, R.N. (Retired), Harbour Master. The Hon. Mr. R. M. Henderson, Director of Public Works. The Hon. Dr. W. B. A. Moore, Acting Director Medical and Sanitary Services. The Hon. Mr. M. J. Breen, Postmaster-General.

FIVE YEARS AGO

(Extracts from the Sunday Herald of November 9, 1930.)

In the Hong Kong St. Leger King's Colour (Mr. G. U. Rosa) caused a minor sensation by defeating Wisdom Stag (Mr. Frost), a hot favourite, in convincing manner.

H. E. Sir William Peel, accompanied by Lady Peel, visited the Diocesan Girls' School and were very interested in all they saw. At Sir William's request the girls were given a holiday.

Miss Madge Clark of the Staff of the Diocesan Girls' School and Mr. Edward C. Thomas, attached to the Diocesan Boys' School, were married at the St. John's Cathedral. The bride was given away by the Rev. W. T. Featherstone and was attended by Miss Marjorie Mason as bridesmaid.

Playing at home, the club were beaten by St. Joseph's in a Senior League soccer game. Leonard and Lim scored for the Saints, while L. Goldman secured the Club's goal.

The Club juniors won their first soccer match of the season when they unexpectedly beat the Navy by three clear goals. Ernle Strange, Alexander and Fowler scored the goals.

Mr. T. J. Price, B. Sc., gave a very interesting lantern lecture at St. Andrew's Church Hall on "Down the Mekong to Angkor." Armstrong had recently toured Mr. T. J. Price and the Rev. A. E. the coast or Indo-China with the object of seeing the vast ruins of Angkor.

SHALL WE FORGET?

Behold the waving poppies red,
Blooming among the warriors dead.
One droops beside a warrior's grave—

A youth who sacrificed and gave His life for King and Country; both

Had need of him, and nothing loth,
He left his all and onward went
To join his comrades to defend
His King and Country, you and me,
To keep untarnished Liberty.

His duty done, he now is dead;
Shall we his sacrifice forget?
What of the others, blind and named,

Brave ones whose hearts were once inflamed
With love of Country, King and all,

Who were the first to heed the call?
Shall we forget?
Shall we forget?

No person, other than the Treasurer and persons acting under his direction, shall, after 12 noon of Saturday, November 9, 1935, export any British dollars, Mexican dollars, Hong Kong subsidiary silver coin, or silver bullion from this Colony to any country or place."

At the special Council meeting the Hon. Mr. C. G. Alabaster said: "Sir, with your consent I rise to move the Suspension of so much of the Standing Orders of this Council as stands in the way of this Council meeting, without written notice or an Order of Business, and of the introduction and passing through all its stages at this meeting of a Bill, copies of which are before members."

By CONSTANCE RAY

IN 1934 American women spent approximately a quarter of a billion dollars on lingerie.

To a woman an undergarment is not merely an undergarment. You may ask why if you like, but the best possible answer appears to be merely that women are funny that way. It's a generally accepted fact, well backed by the profits that roll into the lingerie makers' pockets, that women of all classes and all incomes would rather have frothiness than sturdiness the outstanding characteristic of the garments they wear beneath their outer clothing. Out of this feminine weakness for fripperies has grown a tremendous industry.

Even beneath sports costumes of simplicity and severity, possibly of such fabrics as rough, scratchy tweed, the average woman chooses to have her lingerie completely feminine in character. If money is no object she may choose garments of the finest silk, high-lighted with trimming of spidery lace, patiently, expensively, and skillfully fashioned by hand. For such a woman a hundred-dollar chemise is not extravagance.

If her buying power is limited she must turn to the machine-made garment, which she does in increasing numbers and with increasing satisfaction. Mass production of feminine undergarments now gives American women delicate lingerie concoctions that were once restricted to women of wealth.

No longer does the woman who wants lingerie of delicate fabric, feathery lace, and good fitting have to pay top price. The lace may not be as spidery as that made by nuns in a French convent; the fabric may be synthetic rather than a bit of Japan's fine offering; the stitches may be the firm, precise ones of an American-made sewing machine rather than the tiny, delicate efforts of a skilled needleworker—but the effect is not too bad. The American imitation, to retail at GS1 95, of the lingerie product of a French couturier ticketed GS100, is a garment with a story behind it.

Pastel Shades Still Favourites

THE styling of lingerie is not complex. There are improvements and changes from time to time, but for the most part a slip remains a slip, a chemise a chemise, and panties are always panties, even though they be called scanties. Pastel colours remain the favourites, with pink away out in the lead, despite occasional efforts to popularise black. Whether a woman chooses as fabric chiffon, crepe, satin, handkerchief linen, or one of the synthetics, like rayon, is usually determined by her pocketbook. Lace trimming is almost universally woman's choice, although some, with a taste for the austere which boasts fine workmanship rather than the frill-frou, choose delicate drawn work or sedate embroidery as trimming.

"Lingerie, the most glamorous of feminine accoutrements..." Alice Faye 20th Century star.

Factory-made lingerie, scorned in the past, when needlework was what counted, and what one paid for, is widely accepted today. All sections of the country are dotted with huge establishments devoted to the highly efficient, thoroughly mechanised manufacture of intimate feminine garments. In a typical middle west factory, which supplies countless retail stores, lingerie, the most glamorous of feminine accoutrements, is produced with efficiency but with no sacrifice of chic.

Preferences of the Market

SINCE lingerie on the whole is not radically changed in design from year to year, the lingerie designer does not have to lie awake nights worrying about "trends," as most fashion designers do. Her chore is to know her market's preferences as to price range and general style. From this point of merchandising knowledge she goes on to exercise her personal ingenuity in the arrangement of laces, ribbons, and fabric.

The designer works first with sketches; when she has an effect in a garment she likes she makes it up on a model, always in a size 34. If the finished model is accepted from the standpoint of style and of the other less tangible elements that spell selling success, the first pattern is carefully made, with each detail marked. From this the pattern-makers grade the garment into all sizes.

With her design the originator of the garment specifies the materials to be used, even to the shoulder strap or minute insertions of lace. Cutting, in a factory, is a triumph of American efficiency. Layer upon layer of the chosen fabrics are stretched taut on a long table. The pattern pieces of heavy brown paper, marked as to size, are carefully laid upon the fabric. With an electric slicing gadget that is a far cry from the shears of old the skilled cutter follows the pattern exactly.

On the table are then thousands of pieces of fabric, shapeless and meaningless to the uninitiated, but in the modern factory there is no confusion. Pieces are carefully bundled and kept together for garments of one size. The bits of flimsy material then go to the seamstresses, who, at high speed, put them together with incredible accuracy.

The lace workers proceed with similar efficiency, fashioning the lace trimming the designer has ordained. When the actual garment is sewed together special seamstresses put in the finishing touches of lace. The last step of the process of turning out the factory-made piece of lingerie is its pressing. Here, because of bias cutting and the complicated line of most of the garments, work must be done by hand.

Prominent Visitors Entertained

THE dinner given by the local American community in honour of Vice-President Garner, Mr. Byrns, the Speaker of the House, the Senators and other visitors from America last Tuesday was a great success. The visitors were in excellent humour; they had spent their day seeing Hong Kong and were generally of the opinion that it was the most beautiful place they had seen. Many went as far as to say they would like to live here, and were loud in their praise of the British efficiency everywhere in evidence. Representative Green from Florida had just been married a month, so he and his bride were seeing Hong Kong on their honeymoon. Mr. William Allan White, the well-known editor and writer from Kansas, was an interesting addition to the party, and he too was impressed with the beauties of our Colony.

The Rose Room at the Peninsula Hotel was the scene of all the merriment on Tuesday night and the tables there were most thoughtfully arranged. At the head of the room sat Vice-President and Mrs. Garner, Mr. and Mrs. Byrns, Consul-General and Mrs. Hoover, Sir Atholl and Lady MacGregor, the Hon. Mr. Alabaster, Commodore Sedgwick and General Thackeray. For the rest, small tables seating ten were placed round the room, leaving the centre of the floor free for dancing. A local American lady and gentleman acted as host and hostess at each table.

Lively Mood In Frocks

THE ladies' frocks generally bespoke their lively mood: Mrs. Hoover wore a purple satin gown with lovely bird of paradise corsage, Mrs. Henderson and Mrs. Byrns wore flowered frocks, Mrs. Biggar looked most attractive in a henna lace, and Mrs. Shields wore a wine-colour lace. Mrs. Fraser wore a delightful velvet frock, also choosing a wine shade, while Mr. Tracey and Mrs. Tyson looked well in white. Lady Shenton's gown of purple moire can only be described as beautiful, and Mrs. Dunbar was particularly smart in pale green.

Garden Party At "The Falls"

THE American visitors greatly enjoyed the garden party Sir Robert Ho Tung gave for them last Wednesday afternoon, their only regret being that they had to leave early enough to catch their boat, which sailed at six. Sir Robert Ho Tung's home on the Peak naturally interested them a great deal since it is decorated in the Chinese style, and the garden actually boasts real miniature pagodas!

The guests arrived in unconventional style in two busloads and were received by Sir Robert and Lady Ho Tung; then they had tea, which was served both in the house and in the garden. Groups milled chatting together, enjoying views and novelties. From one angle the scene must have looked almost like a Hollywood film set, for cameras were busy and a movie picture was actually taken.

The Americans are looking forward to their return visit to Hong Kong on the 22nd. This time their visit will be entirely unofficial, and, although they will probably only be here for a day, they hope to fit in quite a lot.

MR. Julius Eigner, a journalist from the Shanghai office of the Trans-Ocean News Service, is in town on his way back from a leave spent in Germany. Mr. Eigner will be staying here for a couple of weeks before returning to Shanghai.

Prominent Visitor

MR. J. P. McEvoy, who visited the Colony last week, is the journalist who wrote the series of travel articles now appearing in the popular American Saturday Evening Post. They are all written in humorous vein, and, knowing how well he could pull our leg if he chose, I wonder what he is going to say about Hong Kong. When I saw him last Saturday he said he was beginning his first article on Hong Kong that very day.

Edward George, the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Renton.

Mr. McEvoy had been in Canton the previous week, where he paid some visits to the Chinese theatre and amusingly described himself as "an old theatre addict." He had planned to see much more of the interior, but that pleasure has been put off to a later date owing to his brief stay. Coming originally from Hollywood, Mr. McEvoy has travelled extensively in the East. He has now gone to Man'ia for the Inauguration Ceremonies and to attend a newspapermen's conference which will be held at the same time.

Loss To Sporting Circles

MR. G. Hesse, of the German Consulate, has just been transferred to Tsinan-Fu. He will be greatly missed in the Colony, as, besides being very popular with the younger set, he is a keen sportsman, playing both tennis and football. His successor, Mr. Arthur Gelewsky, arrived on the 'Scharnhorst' last Tuesday with his wife.

Cocktails At Peninsula

COLONEL and Mrs. L. C. Lewis recently gave a cocktail party in their rooms at the Peninsula Hotel. Their guests were Mrs. R. E. Hindon, Miss Wong Ying, Captain Largeness and Mr. Marshbank. Colonel Lewis showed his interested guests a number of his sketches and a portrait he has begun of Mr. Li Chor-chi. Both Colonel and Mrs. Lewis are very keen on their respective arts. Mrs. Lewis being a very able pianist. They are at present looking forward to the return of their son, who is an army doctor in Shanghai. He will be back in Hong Kong at the end of this month.

MISS Pearl Chow, the daughter of Sir Shouson Chow, and a popular member of the younger Chinese set, has been confined to hospital for a slight operation. Happily all is well and she has now returned home again.

Bathing Continues At Repulse

ACCORDING to the calendar the bathing season should be over by now, but, nevertheless, the warm weather lingers and bathers continue happily to make the most of it. Repulse Bay was as popular as ever last Saturday, and the Dinner Dance in the evening was well attended. The ladies on that occasion favoured crepe material of various shades.

Mrs. Harrison, who was the hostess of one party, wore white crepe gaily patterned with pink flowers. Mrs. W. H. Bell was in a well-cut crepe attractively finished with a square stitched collar, while Mrs. Parry-Wingfield, who was in the same party, looked charming in blue.

Miss R. Clutterbuck's white gown was finished with a becoming cape, and Mrs. J. Mal-Brown, who chose blue satin, wore a small loose coat with a Peter Pan collar. Miss V. Blackburn and Miss B. Hebling were also clad in crepe, the former in lemon and the latter in sagebrush blue. Mrs. Rance added a happy touch of brightness; her gown was a lovely crimson taffeta.

Edward George's Birthday

LITTLE Edward George, the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Renton, is beginning his social activities at an early age. He celebrated his second birthday during last week and entertained a number of his young friends to tea in the gardens of Palm Court. The little ones present were Maureen Rathmell, Jennifer Dunlop, Nancy-Jean Roxburgh, Pauline Davies, Robin Hill, Brian and Desmond McElroy, Michael Davies, George and David Whittaker, Michael Burke.

NOW that we have all seen "Becky Sharp", what is our impression of the future of colour photography? There can be no doubt that the execution of the film was an advance on anything that has been done, but does colour really add to the realistic effect? The question opens up a field of aesthetic controversy on which we have no intention of wandering. The main thing is that in any art there is always a main purpose to which everything else must be subordinated. On the stage we have the personal magnetism of the player, and all we need ask is that the setting shall not be so inappropriate as to detract from the attention which is the actor's right.

In the Elizabethan theatre there used to be a platform which stuck out into the auditorium, from which the actor could declaim his most rhetorical speeches in the midst of his audience, and when he was a strong enough performer such as Burbage, who used to take the leading parts in Shakespeare's plays, the spell was duly bound. It is a fallacy to suppose that the effect would have been as great if he had been surrounded with the splendours of a Drury Lane production.

Robbed of all the advantage of the personal appearance, the screen must concentrate on showing the action of the plot, and the absence of colour is hardly noticed; in fact it would be easy to argue that the screening of a whole film in colour has a more monotonous effect than the monochrome. Indian films show most of the action in monochrome, but introduce one reel in technicolour to show what the gorgeous costumes look like. The idea is not bad, but the sudden change has the effect of making the monochrome reels seem more unreal than they otherwise would.

Plots And Variations

THE question of colour is not after all so important as the question whether the producer has any right to use a famous title or character and then to depart from the mental image which the public has been led to form thereof by the genius of the original author. Becky Sharp is so clearly defined by Thackeray in "Vanity Fair" that she has become a synonym for a type of society adventuress—the woman who uses her charm and wit with a cool calculation that allows nothing to stand in the way of success. In the original she is contrasted with equally marked types that at one time did actually go to make up London Society—with a capital "S".

The first half of the film promised well enough, but then the story went off into something new that merely destroyed the atmosphere of the story that was supposed to be being told. Becky ceased to be elegant; the Marquis ceased to be a gentleman; Joe became a comic pough-boy. Early Victorian England faded into modern Hollywood. And of course it is a trite remark that it seems to be quite impossible for Hollywood to show a King that has a vestige of the royal manner.

It is this sort of thing that is leading to the refusal of many of the best actors and actresses to work for the films. They know that they would only earn the salary at the cost of their reputation as actors. Both the films and their patrons suffer.—COMMENTATOR.

Fast Scoring Record?

G. R. SAYER, the Civil Service Cricket Club batsman, once scored 170 odd runs in the course of an afternoon match against the Gunners at Happy Valley. As he collected his runs in some thing like two hours, this is probably the fastest scoring feat on record.

Queen's College Cricketers

IT is a curious fact that almost all the members of the I.R.C. cricket teams are old Queen's College Boys who received their first lessons in the game at that school. Mr. J. C. Fletcher spent a lot of time teaching the boys and it is his proud boast that he taught A. A. Rungiah, the former Indian skipper and interpreter, how to play cricket.

Schools' Interport Cricket

SOME years ago there was some talk of having Schools' Cricket Interport matches between the Colony and Shanghai but the idea had to be given up owing to lack of support. This seems a pity, for surely there must be many people, who would be willing to help "in a small way."

Inter-Club Rowing Regatta

THOUGH it is regretted that the Rowing Interport will not take place owing to the inability of Shanghai to raise a crew, it is now learned that arrangements are being made for an inter-club rowing regatta between the Royal Hong Kong Yacht Club and the Victoria Recreation Club, to be held some time this month.

Catholic Union Club's Success

AFTER a lapse of many years the Portuguese triangular Billiards tournament has been revived, and the Catholic Union Club are this year's champions, having beaten the Lusitano Club, while the Recreio lost to both Clubs.

Lee Old at Soccer Player

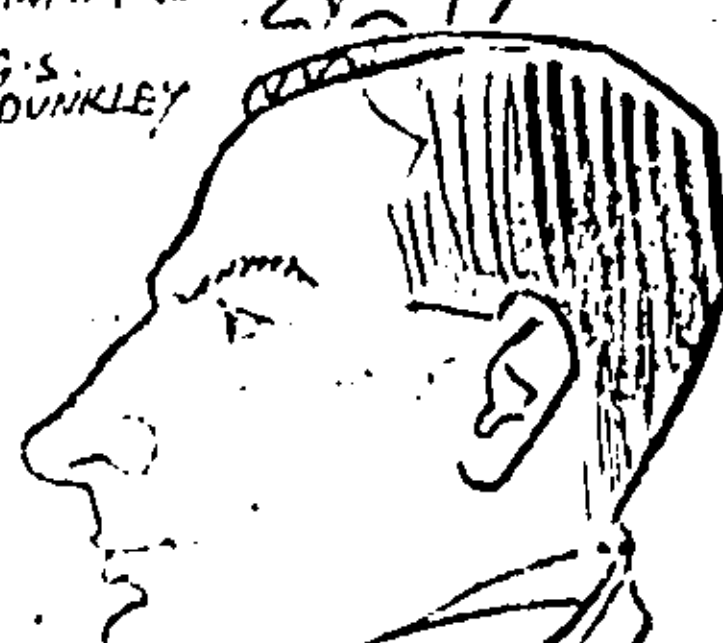

LEE WAI-TONG started playing league football in 1921 and is therefore the oldest player in the Senior League to-day. Brittain, who started in 1923, is the second, but A. V. Gosano is the only player in the Senior League who has played continuously since 1925.

Club Bowls Tournaments

MOST of the main-club bowling competitions are now drawing to a close. A. S. Russell, sagacious champion of the K.B.C.C., beat A. H. Holland by 21 shots to 13 last Sunday to enter the final of the Sagacious Championship, while H. Nasa entered the semi-final round of the President's Cup competition when he beat L. A. R. Duncan by 21 shots to 15. C. B. Hosking and S. A. Bright beat H. Nasa and L. Guy to enter the final of the Park Championship. They will now meet H. Hamilton and J. C. Meyer. In the Semi-final Round of the Vice-President's Cup competition L. Guy beat B. Rogers by 21 shots to 8. J. E. Henson entered the final Round of the Non-Prize winners' competition when he beat E. O'Connell by 21 shots to 12.

Learned on Hard Courts!

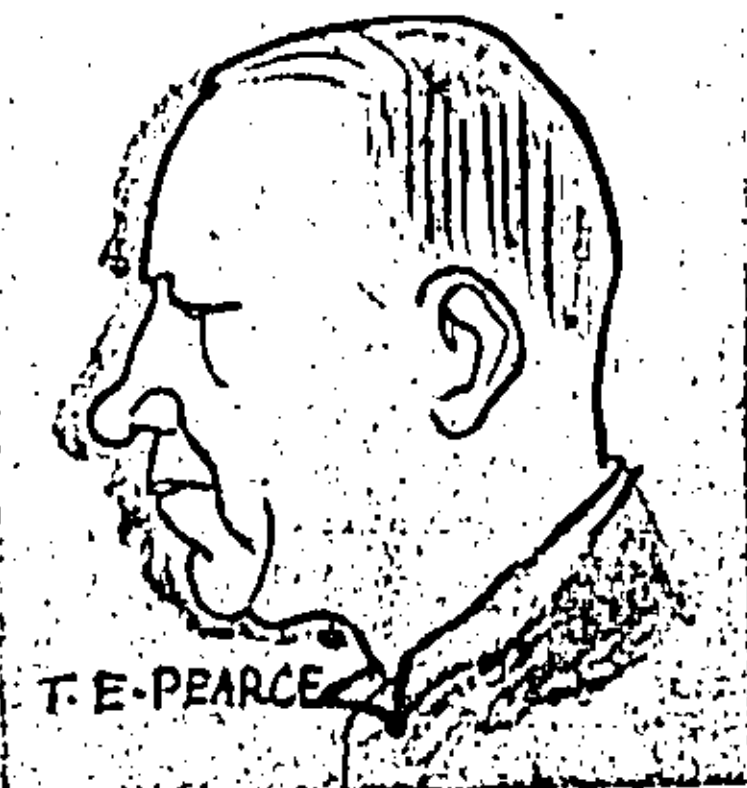

HOW many people know that the Rungiah cousins first learned their tennis on a hard court? Years ago when the Y.M.C.A. had their cement courts in the Leighton Hill district, the cousins used to play there almost every morning and evening. Incidentally, that was where the late J. A. Cassambhoy, runner-up to Sirdar Rungiah for the Colony title in 1933, learned his tennis.

WEDDING AT THE CATHEDRAL

TOD — WESTERN

HONEYMOON IN NEW TERRITORIES

A very pretty wedding was solemnised at St. John's Cathedral yesterday afternoon, when Miss Ursula Phyllis Western became the bride of Lieutenant John Kenneth McAllister Tod, R.N., of H.M.S. Daring, the Rev. H. W. Baines officiating.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Western of Dintill, Gerrards Cross, Buckinghamshire, England, entered the church wearing a white point de soie dress, with a train decorated with white marguerites. She was given away by Captain R. S. Benson, R.N., and was attended by Miss Evelyn Tod, the sister of the bridegroom, Miss Prudence Johnson and Miss Sara Mary Coventry as bridesmaids.

The bridegroom, who is the elder son of Colonel and Mrs. Tod of Four Marks, Alton, Hampshire, England, was attended by Lt.-Commander A. E. Coventry, R.N., as best man.

A reception was later held on board H.M.S. Daring, and the couple then left on their honeymoon, which is to be spent in the New Territories.

STREET SLEEPERS' SHELTERS

To Be Opened Next Month

NEW SITE ACQUIRED

Commencing on the night of December 1, the Colony's two street sleepers' shelters at St. Peter's Church and in Po Yan Street will be opened once again to all the homeless, who have spent the nights during the past summer sleeping on pavements in the west part of the city. The Street Sleepers' Association has been unsuccessful in again renting the original shelter in Po Yan Street, which was opened on last December 15, but a part of the Tung Wah Hospital building, also in Po Yan Street, has been secured for street sleepers. This new shelter is only about 30 to 40 yards from the original one.

According to Miss Mow Fung, Honorary Secretary of the Street Sleepers' Association, great difficulty is being experienced in establishing a shelter on the mainland. For the past few months the officials of the Association have been attempting to secure a place at Yau-mat for the purpose of establishing a shelter for Kowloon's homeless, but no suitable building could be rented. The only vacant places in that locality are Chinese flats, which are impossible to convert into a shelter.

Appeal To Public

Miss Mow Fung stated that the Association would be grateful if anyone, knowing of a suitable place near Yau-mat, would kindly inform the Association, so that a shelter for Kowloon's homeless could be established without any delay.

An appeal has been made to the public for funds to support the Association, but the donations are coming in very slowly. To continue the work financial help is greatly necessary, therefore those who intend to contribute to this worthy fund are kindly requested to send in their donations as soon as possible. Not only money, but contributions in the form of blankets, medical material and foodstuffs are also welcomed.

main aim of forming this Club, Mr. Lim added, was to protect the boys from going astray.

Proprietors of newspaper concerns are requested to support this Club by sending in their contributions as early as possible.

The Right Reverend Bishop R. O. Hall, the original sponsor of the idea, and several prominent personalities of the Colony, including the Chief Magistrate, Mr. W. Schofield, and Mr. R. C. H. Lim, are on the Committee.

PROTESTS AGAINST SANCTIONS

Complaints From All Over France

SERIOUS DAMAGE TO BUSINESS

Paris, Yesterday.

While the French Government is wholeheartedly supporting sanctions French business men are not quite so enthusiastic, and the Government is receiving a number of complaints from all over the country alleging serious damage to business in certain sections.

The merchants of Lyons have sent in a vigorous protest against sanctions, requesting the Government to take steps to make up the business deficiencies caused thereby and to take appropriate action for the protection of French business interests in Italy, which are seriously jeopardised due to the imposition of sanctions and the consequent illwill of the Italians.

NEWSPAPER BOYS' CLUB

Inauguration Next January

DONATIONS REQUESTED

Interviewed by the Sunday Herald yesterday, Mr. R. C. H. Lim, Honorary Secretary of the prospective Chinese Newspaper Boys' Club, stated that at a recent meeting of the ad hoc committee, it was decided to inaugurate the Chinese Newspaper Boys' Club in January next year.

The Club will be established in a church building near St. John's Hall of the University of Hong Kong in Bonham Road. According to Mr. Lim, over $1,000 will be necessary to equip the Club-house with furniture and to make provision for various forms of indoor sports for the boys. A night-school will also be started, and, if in the future substantial donations are forthcoming, some rooms of the club-house will be converted into residential quarters for parentless boys.

Appeal To Public

Mr. Lim stated that the aims of the Chinese Newspaper Boys' Club are to find employment for juvenile offenders; to form recreation clubs for juvenile newspaper sellers; and to teach the members of the Club how to spend their spare time in harmless recreation. Boys up to the age of 15 years only will be admitted to membership. The

CONCERT IN AID OF M.C.L. AND CHARITIES

St. Paul's Girls' College

EXCELLENT SUPPORT

The concert held at the St. Paul's Girls' College last evening in aid of the M. C. L. and other charities, met with excellent support, the students, their parents and friends turning up in large numbers to lend their help. Amongst those present were Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Kotewall, Prof. L. Forster, Mr. L. W. Amps, the Rev. C. B. R. Sargent, Mr. L. A. Lufford, Mrs. Neil McGowan and Miss Ellen Ford.

Praise must be given to the very fine way in which the girls of the College presented Charles Dickens' "The Christmas Carol". It was evident that they had devoted much time to rehearsals, and the way in which they performed was a credit to the "producer".

The entertainment was of a high character throughout and the charities concerned must have benefited considerably as a result.

LOST AUSTRALIAN AIRMAN

SEARCH FOR SIR C. KINGSFORD-SMITH

MELROSE ABANDONS RECORD — BREAKING FLIGHT

Singapore, Yesterday.

The young Australian airman Melrose has abandoned his attempt on the England to Australia solo record to participate in the search with the Royal Air Force for Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, who was engaged in a similar flight and who has been missing for several hours, between Rangoon and Victoria Point. It is feared that he has fallen into the sea.

A squadron of Singapore III flying-boats is likely to range over the Bay of Bengal and a torpedo bombers' squadron will scour the coastal regions.—Reuter.

SEARCH BY R.A.F.

London, Yesterday. There is now considerable anxiety for Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, who with Mr. Fethybridge left Lympne early last Wednesday morning on a record-breaking flight to Australia. The fliers left Allahabad at six o'clock on Thursday evening for Singapore, which they should have reached early yesterday morning.

The Australian airman, C. J. Melrose, engaged on an attempt on the England-Australia solo flight record, reported on arrival at Singapore yesterday that he had passed a machine which he believed was Kingsford-Smith's over the Bay of Bengal 150 miles from shore, and he has now abandoned his flight to join in the search for his countrymen.

At a conference of staff officers of the Royal Air Force at Singapore last night it was decided to institute an air search for the missing machine at dawn to-day. All available Short Singapore III flying boats, which have range of 3,000 miles, will be used, and a squadron of bombers at present at Taiping will be ordered to comb the Malay coast and adjacent waters. The aircraft-carrier Hermes will also play a prominent part in the rescue attempts.

Although Kingsford-Smith's powerful Lockheed Altair monoplane is fitted with wireless no distress signals were heard by radio stations during the night.—British Wireless Service.

NO TRACE

Singapore, Yesterday.—The R.A.F. flying-boats have hitherto found no trace of Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith. Melrose has left to join in the search.—Reuter.

STILL NO RESISTANCE OFFERED

DAGGABUR SERIOUSLY BOMBARDED

COMMANDER OF GARRISON KILLED

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Addis Ababa, Yesterday.

Some skirmishing is still taking place in the vicinity of Makalle, according to reports received here, which add that Ras Kassa's army is now executing a major tactical movement and is expected to be thrown into the Makalle zone in about five days, while on the Abyssinian left flank formations under Ras Ajelu will join in the operations.

That the Abyssinian tactics have now drawn the Italian forces far enough into the country to warrant counter-attacks being made with a fair prospect of success, is the feeling prevalent in military circles here.

A Swedish Red Cross detachment, consisting of five mobile units with the requisite personnel, under the command of Major Hylander, has also reached the capital. One of the lorries is equipped with an electric generating plant, and they have brought enough dressings for approximately six months.

British units are also due to arrive in a fortnight, while Dutch and Norwegian detachments have been promised for December, when there will be 10 Red Cross motor units in Abyssinia.

The Emperor and Crown Prince took part in a Crown Council yesterday, which lasted the whole morning.

GORAHAI CAPTURED

Asmara: Almost simultaneously with the fall of Makalle in the north, one of the Abyssinian key positions in the south has also been captured by the Italians, according to reports reaching here, which state that the town of Gorahai, which for some weeks past has been the goal of the Italian operations on the southern front, was at last occupied by the troops of General Graziani yesterday morning.

Since the reports do not mention any fighting it may be assumed that the Abyssinians followed their usual practice by evacuating the town in the face of the determined Italian advance.—Trans-Ocean Service.

LARGE GATHERING AT GRAVESIDE

The death occurred at 8 a.m. yesterday, from heart failure, of Mr. William Murray Johnston, chief timekeeper at the Kowloon Dock.

Mr. Johnston, who was 68 years of age, came to the Colony in 1909. He is survived by a widow and one daughter.

A fine athlete in his younger days and a noted sprinter, Mr. Murray in later years took up lawn bowls as his principal recreation. He was a member of the Kowloon Bowling Green Club and the Kowloon Docks Recreation Club and played for both.

The Funeral

The funeral took place at 5 o'clock last evening at the Protestant Cemetery, Happy Valley, the Rev. Frank Short officiating.

A large number of friends attended, amongst them being Messrs. E. L. Hosie, H. Scott, R. Morrison, J. V. Ramsay, A. M. Calman, S. Gray, G. R. Humble, T. Colman, J. Kempton, J. Lindsay, J. Adam, H. G. OBITUARY

Mr. J. R. Archibald

OLD COLONY RESIDENT DIES IN SCOTLAND

News has been received of the death, at Alloa, Scotland, on September 29, of Mr. John R. Archibald, of Hong Kong and latterly of Penang, Straits Settlements.

The late Mr. Archibald arrived in Hong Kong on September 4, 1925, to join the staff of the Green Island Brickworks, Deep Water Bay, under the management of Shawan, Tomes and Co., Ltd. Subsequently he accepted an offer from the Borneo Co., Ltd. and left the Colony in 1930 to take up a post with the Alexandra Brickworks, Ltd., at Butterworth, Province Wellesley (Penang). Early in the present year his health began to give rise to much anxiety and eventually, at the earnest solicitations of his wife, he sailed for home, arriving in London on May 21, when he entered a nursing home and was at once operated on for appendicitis.

His health, however, did not improve, but worsened, and an Edinburgh specialist diagnosed kidney trouble, giving little hope of recovery; and this proved the immediate cause of his untimely death. He is survived by a widow and one child, a daughter.

Of a warm-hearted disposition and possessing a genius for friendship, the late Mr. Archibald made a host of friends while in Hong Kong, with many of whom he kept in touch after leaving the Colony. He was a member of the Civil Service Club, while in Hong Kong, and a keen member of its bowling team.

The Emperor, Haile Selassie, aided by these five native generals and the famous Turkish general and soldier of fortune, Vehib Pasha, massed 1,000,000 tribesmen to make a final desperate stand against Italian invaders to save their flag, described above, from being replaced over their country by Italy's standard.

his wife, were among the passengers on the s.s. President Polk, which left yesterday for Manila.
Mr. Geanella is one of the oldest having acted previously in many parts of Europe and America. Before being appointed to India, Mr.

Geanella was Charge d'Affaires

Both Mr. and Mrs. Geanella were enchanted by the natural

LEAGUE OF NATIONS*Sanctions Procedure
At Geneva*FIVE PROPOSALS TABLED

London, Yesterday.
Following favourable replies by Governments members of the League concerning the application of sanctions, it is announced that:—

(1): Fifty-one Governments agree to place an embargo on the export of arms, ammunition and implements of war to Italy, and 49 accept raising the embargo as concerns Ethiopia;

(2): Fifty-one Governments agree to the proposal depriving Italy of financial resources;

(3): Forty-nine agree to prohibit Italian imports;

(4): Forty-nine agree to embargo certain exports to Italy;

(5): Fifty-six consent to the proposal of the organisation of mutual support between the States in applying sanctions.

The same proposals were also sent to 10 non-members of the League. Of these Egypt declared that she agreed in principle with the five proposals.
The United States announced the measures taken to prevent the country being drawn into the Italo-Ethiopian hostilities, and to help to hinder war.

Brazil said she did not want to take part in the League measures and reserved freedom of action in any event, in accordance with the interests of her international obligations and the principles always guiding her foreign policy.

The German reply has not arrived, but according to information received at the Secretariat the German Government is going to take measures to prevent certain speculation on goods for delivery to the belligerents.

Further Proposals

Further proposals submitted to the Governments to complete the sanctions system are:

(1): Extension of the embargo on exports of petrol, coal, iron and steel to Italy as soon as the conditions rendering such an embargo effective are fulfilled;

(2): Prevention of the re-export to Italy across third countries of goods subject to the embargo;

(3): The derogations from the prohibition on Italian imports in favour of certain contracts now being executed;

(4): The establishment of methods of payment under the clearing agreements;

(5): The derogations from the prohibition of Italian imports for books, newspapers and periodicals;

(6) Future work defined.
A sub-committee was appointed to deal with the claims for exemptions for contracts now running. Another subcommittee was appointed to watch the application of sanctions after November 18 and to make a report to the Committee of Eighteen.

Co-ordination Measures

The co-ordination measures under Article XVI of the Covenant have been continued by the Co-ordination Committee, with the help of the Committee of Eighteen and several subcommittees. The system contained in the five proposals previously formulated was completed by further proposals to the Governments members. November 18 was fixed for the coming into force of economic sanctions, and measures were taken for subsequent enforcement.—

ward with every confidence to their recital to-morrow, at 9.15 are the two works that will be can be assured of excellent renderings. The recital will take no longer than 1½ hours.

The solos will be sung by Mrs.

Rev. Cyril Brown (Baritone).
Mr. Lindsay A. Lafford will pre-

Children. These two deserving causes need help.

While seats and programmes are free it is hoped that those who attend the recital will bear in mind similar charges in a concert hall and give in proportion.

As Monday is a public holiday, to avoid disappointment in obtaining programmes any undistri-buted will be available at the Cathedral before the recital.

MEETS IN PARIS*"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL

Paris, Yesterday.

The first International Film Chamber, whose foundation in the interests of closer international co-operation was decided upon by the International Film Congress at Berlin last March and in subsequent conferences held at Munich and Venice, has been inaugurated here and has held its first meeting, attended by delegates from all the important European countries except Holland, Soviet Russia and England, which latter, however, was represented by an "observer."

Dr. Scheuermann of Berlin was elected president, while the Swedish delegate, M. Andersen, the French delegate, M.
Gandera, and the Italian delegate, Signor Roncoroni, were nominated Vice-Presidents.

The proposed modification of the international copyright law, the creation of a facultative international board of arbitration, the organisation of international film exhibitions and the establishment of a clearing office for the equalisation of foreign chief topics discussed in the storm, and these countries have many professional and amateur societies, and it is with a view to helping beginners in the purchase and care of exotic aquarium fishes that the above-mentioned society has been formed locally.

It will also interest itself in local Chinese fresh-water fishes and stream plants suitable for aquariums.

Regular meetings will be held,
and it is hoped to open an exhibition next Spring. Full particulars may be obtained from the Hon. Secretary, Mr. B. E. Sugars of the Public Works Department.

POPPY DAY
APPEAL*Large Sums Already Expended*HIGH STANDARD OF RELIEF

Some satisfaction will be derived from the indications that applications for assistance, although they incurred the large total of £80,000 during the past year, are stabilising, with the prospects of falling off gradually with normal mortality and if the national trade conditions do not deteriorate.

Nevertheless, since the toll of death also connotes the passing of subscribers and supporters, funds are required with which to carry on the benevolent activities of the Officers' Benevolent Department, and well-wishers are asked to continue to subscribe in cash or in kind, so that the standard of relief afforded to these most deserving applicants may be maintained at a scale commensurate with the inestimable services which they themselves, or their officer bread-winners who have passed over, so nobly gave to the British Empire in her hour of trial and need.

DIAMOND JUBILEE HONoured

Celebration At St. Joseph's College

SIXTY YEARS OF GROWTH.

The celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of St. Joseph's College, one of the oldest educational institutions in the Colony, began yesterday morning when His Lordship the Right Rev. Bishop H. Valtorta celebrated a Pontifical Low Mass in the College Chapel.

The mass was attended by the Brothers of the College and the La Salle College, and students of both colleges.

In the course of his sermon, His Lordship said:—

"A Diamond Jubilee is a great event in the history of any institution. To-day shall we congratulate the Brothers? Most certainly. Most certainly we must not only congratulate them, but we must do something more. We must congratulate also the pupils who have received their education from them. The Brothers have made a great success in the Colony. Two big Colleges stand as monuments of their coming to Hong Kong—they are monuments of their success."

"Thousands have received their education from the Brothers. Whatever success they have attained in life it is due to the Brothers. Many are in Heaven; we must offer congratulations to them because their salvation is due to the Christian education received at the hands of the Brothers. We must do something more; we must thank God and praise God for sending the Brothers to Hong Kong. It is a lasting benefit to the Colony. What brought the Brothers to Hong Kong? It was due to the prayers of the saintly Bishop Raimondi."

"The Church will continue to the end of the world and any institution that is within the Church will last to the end of the world. I dare say that the College will see its Centenary and many more throughout the ages."

"Let this then be our prayer to St. John Baptist de la Salle; that while the pupils are called to Heaven one by one, the work of the Brothers may continue for centuries and centuries."

"It was on November 8, 1875, that the Brothers took charge of an English School that had been established by His Lordship the late Bishop Raimondi. The Portuguese of Macao had come to the Colony in large numbers about 1864 and it was on that account that His Lordship opened the school for them. It was founded in 1864 under the patronage of the Holy Redeemer and was situated in Staunton Street."

"A band of three Brothers who arrived in 1875 were immediately given charge of the small school. But from so small a beginning success crowned every year's efforts, till to-day the Brothers have two very beautiful schools, St. Joseph's in Kennedy Road and La Salle in Kowloon."

Commercial Course

"The Brothers gave a commercial course right away with due emphasis on English, and the results are evident to-day. The loyalty, diligence and business-like habits of the students of those days were proverbial and served as a model for the present students and old boys."

"Hong Kong was making rapid progress under the British flag and there was then, as now, a demand for expansion. Were it not for the generosity of the Government, St. Joseph's would probably have remained a small school. In 1877 the Government, through His Excellency Sir John Pope Hennessey, gave a grant of $6,000 towards the erection of a new College in Robinson Road, and on November 3, 1881, the foundation stone was laid by Sir John himself. On September 15, 1882, Dr. E. Tillo, Director of Education, inaugurated the new school rooms and 100 boys answered the roll-call on the first day."

Special Chinese Class

"Not long after the Brothers' arrival and at the request of the Bishop a special class for Chinese students was opened. In two years they numbered 90 and have ever since gone on increasing. "During the governor-

MANY TELEGRAMS OF SYMPATHY

MUSSOLINI SENDS PERSONAL GOOD WISHES

Nanking, yesterday. Premier Mussolini of Italy has sent to President Wang, through Signor Vincenzo Lojano, the Italian Ambassador to China, the Italian Government's and his personal best wishes for a speedy recovery.

Telegrams making sympathetic enquiry after the condition of President Wang have also been received by the Executive Yuan from M. Kosciakowski, Prime Minister of Poland, Baron von Neurath, German Foreign Minister, and Sir Miles Lampson, the former British Minister to China and now High Commissioner in Egypt.

Other similar messages have been received from Baron J. Guillaume, the Belgian Minister to China, in the name of the Belgian Government, and M. Henri Hoppenot, Charge d'Affaires of the French Legation in China, in the name of M. Laval, Premier and Foreign Minister of France, and from the President of the Royal Academy, London.

All these messages have been appropriately acknowledged by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.—Central News Agency.

ship of Sir John Hennessey the disabilities of 'Confessional' Schools were removed and from that time St. Joseph's received a Government Grant.

"In 1898 the accommodation was increased and the higher classes entered for the Oxford examinations, which were replaced by the Hong Kong University examinations in 1915.

"The period of the greatest growth was reserved for later days. Under the administration of the Rev. Brother Almar the Brothers have acquired extensive buildings both in Hong Kong and Kowloon."

Building Activities

"Brother Almar's tenure of office has been one of continued building activities. He had not long arrived here when the retaining walls of the playground at Caine Road collapsed and had to be rebuilt, and shortly after that building operations were started on the three-storey building which is at present occupied by the Wah Yan College."

"In 1918, when an earthquake damaged the old college building and the College had to find other accommodation, the old German Club was acquired. The new premises were not sufficient for the needs of the school, but the Brothers managed to carry on for some years. Half of the classes were continued 'in the new premises in Robinson Road while in Kennedy Road every available inch of space was made use of. Later the building near the Peak Tram station was added and when the wing housing the Chapel and large assembly hall."

"Realising the possibilities of Kowloon, Brother Almar then interested himself there and built the large La Salle College; and a novitate is now in course of construction in Kowloon for the training of Chinese Brothers for the Brotherhood."

Prince's Visit

"On the occasion of the visit of the H.R.H. The Prince of Wales it was St. Joseph's that was most conspicuous at the school rally and in testimony of its loyalty the College was presented with a beautiful photograph of the Prince signed by himself, which is one of the most treasured ornaments of the College."

"In the forefront of progress St. Joseph's has always led the way. The First Boy Scout troop formed in Hong Kong was St. Joseph's and when during the war the movement died a natural death in Hong Kong, St. Joseph's was the first to restart it in 1918."

"In sports too it has always played a prominent part and its past pupils are scattered all over the globe."

R.E.O.C.A. DANCE

There was a very large attendance, estimated at over 200, at the of the Bishop a special class Royal Engineers' Old Comrades Association dance at the China Fleet Club last night, excellent music being provided by the dance band of the Lincolshire Regiment.

UTILITY ACT
IN U.S.Baltimore Decision Questioned

Manila, Yesterday.
 Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Montana), co-author of the Wheeler-Rayburn Utility Holding Company Act, who arrived here yesterday with the Congressional party, stated last night that he was sure that the Baltimore decision declaring the Act unconstitutional would be reversed in the higher courts. He declared: "I have not seen the text of the decision, but from what has been reported here it seems plain that the Baltimore judge simply does not know the law. It looks like a purely political decision." — Reuter.

BALDWIN'S APPEAL FOR CONFIDENCE

FINAL ELECTION BROADCAST

DEMOCRACY ON TRIAL

London, Yesterday.

"If you give me this confidence now, I will give you all that is in me during the few years that now can only remain to me at my present age," declared Mr. Stanley Baldwin in his final election broadcast from The Chequers last evening, in which he urged that a strong and stable Great Britain was the surest guarantee of the happiness and prosperity of its own people and the greatest bulwark of peace in the world.

The whole world was watching the election because therein democracy was on trial. It was our duty to show the world, he continued, that democracy could pursue a constant course and be as resolute in will as any dictatorship.—Reuter.

Some Hard Fights Coming

LAST STAGE OF ELECTION CAMPAIGN

London: With the end of the series of political broadcast addresses last night when the Prime Minister, Mr. Stanley Baldwin, spoke for the National Government, the General Election campaign entered on its last stage. At present the public interest centres on one or two contests in which leading personalities are engaged. The Prime Minister was returned unopposed, but his colleague and predecessor at the head of the National Government, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, is involved in what is generally agreed will be a hard fight at the Seaford Harbour mining constituency.

Mr. MacDonald refused to consider a safer seat. He is opposed by Mr. E. Shinwell, Secretary for Mines in the last Labour Government. As a National Labour candidate Mr. MacDonald is assured of the unqualified support of the Conservative voters, but the attitude of the Liberals is doubtful. His majority at the last election was just under 6,000 in a total vote of about 52,000.

The Home Secretary, Sir John Simon, has represented Spens Valley since 1922. His majority at the last election was just over 4,000, and Labour, which won the seat in 1919, is making a determined attack. The large Liberal element in the constituency, which supported him as a Liberal National candidate last time, may be more divided on this occasion on the tariff issue.

LIBERAL LEADER
The Liberal Opposition leader, Sir Herbert Samuel, is under fire from both Conservative and Labour opponents in Darwen. He had a majority of over 4,000 as a supporter of the National Government in the last election, although he was opposed by an unofficial Conservative who polled heavily. At East Bristol the Socialist leader, Sir Stafford Cripps, who recently resigned from the Labour Party Executive over the sanctions, is opposed in a straight fight by a National Labour candidate, Major Church. Sir Stafford Cripps defeated his Conservative opponent at the last election by 429 votes.

Several members of the last Labour Cabinet, who were defeated in 1931, are expected to retain their seats. In West Scotland, which was a Labour stronghold before 1931, the Socialist vote will be split by rival candidates of the official Labour Party and the Independent Labour Party.—British Wireless Service.

SISTER OF NIETZSCHE DIES AT 89

Wien, Yesterday.—The only sister of the famous German philosopher Nietzsche, Mrs. Elisabeth Förster, died last evening, aged 89. The deceased devoted her life to the care of the famous Nietzsche Museum at Weimar, also editing his posthumous works.—Trans-Ocean Service.

This striking picture shows the Italian cavalry in full charge on the Ethiopian positions during the drive on Addwa. It was flown to Rome, sent by telephoto to London, transmitted to the United States by radio, and then dispatched by ship to Hong Kong.

NAVAL AFFAIRS NO ANGLO-ITALIAN PACT PENDING

London, Yesterday.
The report of an Anglo-Italian naval pact is officially stated in London to be baseless. The report was due to a misunderstanding of the talk between British and Italian naval experts in London and the talk between Sir Eric Drummond and Signor Mussolini in Rome. It is emphasised that the naval experts merely exchanged views concerning the forthcoming naval conference.—Reuter.

Bargaining Power Strengthened

INCORPORATION OF CRUISERS NOT YET COMPLETED

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL
Rome, Yesterday.
The two Italian 1935 cruisers Littoria and Vittorio Veneto which are still under construction and will probably not be completed before the end of next year, have been formally incorporated into the Italian fleet, by a decree published here yesterday.

The measure has obviously been taken in order to strengthen Italy's bargaining power at the forthcoming naval conference in London.—Trans-Ocean Service.

TALKS CONCLUDED

London, Yesterday.
The conversations between British and Italian naval experts on technical problems preliminary to the meeting of the Naval Conference arranged for December 5 concluded on Thursday after three meetings, which were sufficient to complete the business. The Italian experts will return to Italy almost immediately.

The United States Government has sent official acceptance of the invitation to the conference. The other signatories of the Washington and London Naval Treaties who have accepted are Japan, France, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India.

SHIPS COLLIDE IN THAMES

Union Castle Liner Damaged

London, Yesterday.
The Union Castle 6,592-ton liner Grantully Castle, outward bound for Mauritius and South Africa, was in collision in the Thames at Gallions Reach yesterday morning with a 1,988-ton Finnish steamer soon after the liner had left the South West India Dock and had to put back to the King George V Dock. The vessel was struck amidships and some plates on her port side were damaged.

Two hundred passengers were awaiting the arrival of the Grantully Castle at Tilbury and some of those joined the same company's ship Arundel Castle before she sailed from Southampton in the afternoon. Others are awaiting the next sailing.—British Wireless Service.

COMMUNICATIONS IN ENGLAND

London: The Advisory Technical Communications Transit Committee is now holding its 10th session. The agenda includes questions of railway transport, road traffic, signalling,

HIGH-HANDED JAPANESE ACTS IN NANKING AREA

Wholesale Arrests Carried Out

CHINESE AUTHORITIES NOT EVEN CONSULTED

Nanking, Yesterday.
According to the Neutral News Agency Correspondent here, the Japanese have practically taken the law into their own hands since the beginning of the month. The Japanese authorities have made wholesale arrests of students and the heads of several educational institutions, who are alleged to be connected with anti-Japanese activities.

These arrests were carried out without even the consent of the Chinese authorities, who, it is learned, had not even been consulted.

The Nanking Government is at present preparing a protest against these arrests. This, however, does not seem to affect the Japanese, for the searches for anti-Japanese propagandists and the arrests of suspected persons, immaterial of what their status is, are still being carried on.

UNPLEASANT DEVELOPMENTS
The Central authorities are anticipating some unpleasant developments in the near future and thousands of Chinese troops have been distributed to various points along the Shanghai-Nanking and the Nanking-Hankow Railway lines. Many well-to-do Chinese residents have already left for Shanghai, taking all their belongings. In short, another Sino-Japanese conflict is expected soon.—Neutral News.

MORE JAPANESE "DEMANDS"

Resignation Of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek

ACCUSED OF ANTI-JAPANESE MACHINATIONS

Canton, Yesterday.
Messages from Shanghai received here state that the Japanese have demanded the resignation of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, who is accused by the Japanese of "encouraging anti-Japanese feelings among the masses. Among the demands of the Japanese is that the coast from Canton to Shanghai must be converted into demilitarised zones, in which no Chinese troops must be stationed.—Neutral News.

"SUNDAY HERALD" SPECIAL
Munich, Yesterday.

Some interesting information regarding the grandiose building programme destined to add a new note to Munich's already famous architectural treasures was volunteered by the Bavarian Minister and National-Socialist district leader, Herr Adolf Wagner, at a press reception held here yesterday afternoon. The speaker characterised the new buildings now nearing completion as only a beginning. In addition it was intended to erect a second block of administration offices as large as that now in the final stages of construction, an enormous hall with a capacity of 60,000 persons, a museum "such as the world has never seen before," in which would be exhibited everything in any way connected with the National-Socialist viewpoint and the rebirth of Germany.

Finally Munich would be presented with a new opera house, which would be begun this autumn and be "the biggest opera house in the world and, what is more, the most beautiful opera house on the face of the globe."—Trans-Ocean Service.

H.K. 213 AFTER 151 FOR 4: SHANGHAI 56 FOR 2 IN INTERPORT

Fincher Again Saves Colony

STAND OF 113 WITH GARTHWAITE

PAT MADAR 7 FOR 76 ON FAST WICKET

VISITORS' FIELDING EXCELLENT

SHANGHAI, with eight wickets in hand, are 157 runs behind Hong Kong's first innings total as the result of the first day's play in the 35th encounter between the two ports at the H.K.C.C. yesterday.

Undoubtedly the outstanding feature of the day was the fourth-wicket partnership between Teddy Fincher and Garthwaite. Coming together with the total at 38 for 3 and with the Shanghai team all on their toes, the pair added 113 runs in 110 minutes, after having had the partnership broken by the fifth interval, which was taken with the score at 80 for 3.

Fincher was seen at his best while scoring 72 and was all out for the century when he mistimed a full toss from Pat Madar and was easily caught at square leg. Giving one chance — to Humphreys off Jenkins when 50 — Fincher scored the majority of his runs on the leg side, his timing of anything short being very accurate. He batted for 147 minutes for his 72, scored out of 151, and including eight boundaries.

Garthwaite gave as fine an exhibition of forcing forward play as has been seen on the Club ground for some years. He opened confidently and very seldom failed to make a shot without hitting the ball in the middle of the bat. The majority of his runs were scored as the result of powerful off-driving. Scoring his 50 in 94 minutes, he batted for 122 minutes for his 59, scored out of 113, and including seven boundaries. He was out when trying to force against Pat Madar.

The Colony made a disastrous start after Tom Hayward had won the toss, Tam Pearce being caught off his glove when the fifth ball of Elliott's opening over coiled up sharply. Worse, however, was to follow, for, with only 21 runs added, Alce Pearce, who looked as if he was settling down for a big score, failed to get hold of a half-volley from Pat Madar and was well caught on the edge of the boundary 25-2-4.

A. H. Madar stayed with Fincher while 13 runs were added, but was then the victim of what appeared from the Pavilion to be a very doubtful obstruction decision, the ball hitting him on the thigh. Madar had only previously registered two glorious into-out boundaries in succession off Leach, and was settling down quickly. It was bad luck, as he has seldom opened an innings with such confidence. 34-4-11.

Breach Filled

When all appeared lost, however, Garthwaite stepped into the breach with a really classical knock. Maintaining a bold front from the commencement, he, however, refused to "have a go" at Pat Madar, contenting himself with watching the ball very closely and seeing that his shots were made along the carpet. He showed admirable patience, even rivaling Fincher in his dourst mood, until he had passed his half-century. Then, after taking 28 minutes to score nine runs, he forsook all his earlier caution and "had a go" with the inevitable result, Booth holding a spinner to cover point.

Fincher, however, left before Garthwaite, after a splendid all-round display in which his strength on the leg side was clearly demonstrated. Fincher has proved time and again that he is the Colony's most consistent batsman and yesterday's performance proved no exception.

"Rot" Sets In

Hong Kong had recovered from 38 for 3 to 151 for 4 when Tom Hayward went out to join Garthwaite, but, as is usual after a big stand has been broken, he lost his partner for the addition of only nine runs. Pearce left after a stay

G. B. Elliott, who was not bowled sufficiently.

Donald Leach, Shanghai's brilliant all-rounder.

of less than 10 minutes when he was beaten all ends up by a ball from Leach that came in like greased lightning from leg to take his off stump. 103-6-2.

Ricketts, after a shaky opening, settled down very promisingly, only to be unlucky to get a ball from Pat Madar that kept low and hit the bottom of the middle stump. 100-7-11.

Minu delighted the crowd with two boundaries in succession off Pat Madar, which, incidentally, raised the second century, but was caught off a skier, which Harry Madar judged very nicely. 208-8-0.

Hayward, who had in the meanwhile scored 28 as the result of well placed forward shots to the off and two perfect leg glance boundaries, was then caught having a dip at Madar, Stokes accepting the catch near the scoreboard at the Naval Yard end.

Tea was then taken with the score at 212 for 9.

Innings Closes At 213

Pereira, who accompanied Dunkley to the crease on the resumption, scored a single off Leach and was then stumped off a long hop from Pat Madar, the Hong Kong innings thus closing for 213 after 211 minutes' play.

The Shanghai bowling, with the exception of Leach and Elliott, who was surprisingly neglected, never looked really dangerous, but it was always very accurate, even during the big fourth wicket stand. Elliott was coming off the pitch very fast, but, with the exception of one over to Fincher, failed to give him any length, though he was given only seven overs in all, two at the Naval Yard end and five at the Supreme Court end.

Leach bowled heroically throughout — in one spell he sent down seven overs for one run — but Stokes, who now mixes them up, was a disappointing opening bowler, being very much to the liking of Garthwaite, who made two glorious cover drives off his bowling to send up the 100 after 105 minutes.

Pat Madar bowled his usual slow stuff with the occasional faster ball, and fully deserved his 7 for 76, never being afraid to toss them up. Jenkins, who was no-balled three times, never seemed to get over it, and was disappointing, though it must be remembered that a soft wicket is more to his liking. Booth bowled only one over, that before lunch.

The "Carnegie" Williams' fast bowling touch was revealed at tiffin as a good joke on the local press! He has been bowled once in Shanghai.

The Shanghai fielding was excellent throughout, particularly that of Harry Madar and Stokes on the respective boundaries and Booth at cover.

Given 58 minutes' batting before the close of play, Shanghai sustained an early setback when Humphreys, who was clearly nonplussed by Pereira's expressions, was clean bowled at 13 when attempting to cover up with his pads! Stokes also did not appear too comfortable against Pereira, though he was scoring off him.

Kermani, who is known not to like fast bowling, however, played the I.R.C. skipper with confidence, hitting 34 out of 59 before being caught at square leg off a short ball from Pearce that came across sharply. Stokes, against whom there was a confident appeal for an over, was off Garthwaite when he was 10, batted for 45 minutes for his 34, which included a five (an overhauled boundary by Alce Pearce off Minu) and four boundaries. He was not, however, the same Stokes who hit 101 and 60 off the Hong Kong attack last year in Shanghai.

Kermani was lucky to be let off by Pearce off Ricketts when he was eight—the miss may prove expensive.

Hayward surprised when he opened the Colony bowling with Garthwaite, who had had over two hours' batting, but he took him off after four overs. Minu, however, did not settle down at all well as a change bowler and never once looked dangerous.

Alce Pearce was outside the off stump with the majority of his deliveries, while Ricketts had only two overs, during which he did not concede a run. Pereira, however, was the most impressive bowler.

REFLECTIONS

THE wicket was a fast one, but it took spin.

Fincher and Garthwaite, by adding 113 runs for the fourth wicket, probably established an Interport record. Unfortunately, no records of the fall of wickets in the earlier matches can be found.

Garthwaite is Hong Kong's most stylish batsman.

Fincher is Hong Kong's most consistent batsman.

Tom Hayward is no back number.

Leach over-bowled himself. Elliott, Jenkins and Booth might have been given more overs, especially Elliott.

Hong Kong's score is not big enough.

Garthwaite should not have opened the Colony bowling after two hours' batting.

When the 200 was hoisted a new ball was sent out, but Leach went on bowling with an old ball to give Pat Madar the new one....

Kermani is a fine wicket-keeper. Not until 190 runs had been scored did he allow a bye.

CIVIL SERVICE BEATEN

Six Wickets Fall For No Runs

On the Police ground yesterday the Police R.C. beat the Civil Service Cricket Club juniors in a friendly cricket match by 4 wickets.

The visitors batted first and scored 77 runs, their last six wickets falling for no runs. The Police replied with 127 runs for 9 wickets, T. Loughlin being top-scorer with 54 not out. He hit eight boundaries during his stay at the wicket.

C.S.C.C.—77 (F. Harper 33, R. Davis 35, Danbrowsky, 4 for 5).

Police 127 for 9 (T. Loughlin 54, not out, F. J. Ling 4 for 33, H. D. Ling 2 for 17).

In a friendly cricket match at Happy Valley yesterday, H.M.S. Medway beat a team from H.M.S. Capetown by 60 runs.

The winners batted first and scored 93, Nankville being top scorer with 24. H.M.S. Capetown could only manage 33 in reply. Bartlett, 5 for 6, being mainly responsible for their collapse.

Y.M.C.A. DRAW WITH H.K.S.R.A.

S. Fowler Scores Twice

The match between the H.K.S.R.A. and the Y.M.C.A., which was played on the Marina ground yesterday afternoon, was a rather scrappy affair, with neither team showing superiority in any part of the game. The final whistle blew when each side had secured three goals.

Kishan Singh opened the scoring for the Army team one minute from the commencement, and S. Fowler equalised about two or three minutes later. From that point onwards it was a ding-dong struggle, the play shifting consistently from one end of the field to the other.

Kishan Singh scored again just before half-time, and again S. Fowler equalised. Gurdip Singh scored for the H.K.S.R.A. in the second half, while W. Brown netted the "Y's" third goal.

MUNSANG COLLEGE

Annual Prizegiving
And ReportFINANCIAL DRIVE FOR OWN SCHOOL BUILDING

A year of excellent work, a slight falling off in the year's attendance, owing to pupils who failed in the promotion examinations going to other schools, and an ardent appeal for assistance in the financial drives now being carried out for funds for a building of their own were the most important points in the annual report of the Munsang College, as presented by the Headmaster, Mr. R. Huang, B.Sc., at the prize-giving ceremony yesterday.

The prizes were presented by Sir Henry Pollock, K.C. The Hon. Dr. S. W. T'ao, Chairman of the College Council, attended the ceremony.

A varied and interesting entertainment was given by the pupils before the prize distribution, the outstanding item being a humorous sketch entitled "Who wrote the letter?" by the Junior School Boys. It depicted a court scene in a breach of promise suit.

The elocution was admirable, both the pronunciation and enunciation being very good.

The Report

In the course of his report for the year the Headmaster stated:

"Our highest enrolment during the year was 357 as against 376 of the previous year, a decrease of about 5 1/2 per cent. This number, however, did not include that of Munsang's Free Night School for the poor, which had over 60 pupils. There were 363 meetings in the Middle School and 402 for the Primary Department, average attendance being 94 per cent.

Inspector's Visit

"The Inspector of Schools Mr. A. O. Brown visited the school twice during the year. The following are some extracts taken from his report:

"The general work of the school, he said, was good, especially written work. The boys conversed more readily than they had hitherto done with the Inspector. Good use was made of the Geography Room. The school rather specialised in the Vernacular and in Mandarin. The lavening of boarders the facilities for games, the frequent concerts and other gatherings in the very useful Assembly Hall, the School Magazine and the untiring efforts of the staff had developed a 'good spirit' in the school. He again stressed that the discipline was excellent."

Athletics

"In athletics we still retain the Championship Cup of Kowloon City Inter-school Sports and the Junior Basketball Championship Shield for all Kowloon schools, which, as you see, are shown here to-day. Ample facilities for healthy sport and recreation have been provided and fully enjoyed by the students. The early morning setting-up exercises for boarders still form an integral part of the character-training in the school besides their advantages to health. We are very fortunate in having such a spacious playground at our disposal. Each year I have to thank the several land-owners for their kindness in letting us use their ground free of charge."

Building Fund

"For the purpose of raising funds for a new school building a financial campaign has been started and so far the sum of over $10,000 has been raised by the keenness of the staff and students."

The following were the prize winners:

Graduation Certificates:—Kwok Siu Nam, Chan Pak Man, Lau Chiu Tak, Fred Chang, Hong Tong Tick, and Tia King Hong.

Junior Middle School Certificates:—Yong Yook Tong, Tang Kai Fong, Wong Wah Hong, Chan Sook Yim, Ho Yiu Po, Kwong Joon Joo, Wong Wei Ho, Tang Sook Han, Lee Oi Yan, Wong Yuk Ying, Wong Ng Yan, Chan Sun Kwai, Cheong Oi Kwong, Wong Yuk Tim, Chan Wai Lin, Ng Yick Fui, and Wong Suk Wah.

Honour Hong University Matriculation Certificates:—Kwok Siu Nam, and Chan Pak Man.

Commemorated

CEREMONY IN MUNICH

Munich, Yesterday.

The annual commemoration and celebration of the abortive National Socialist uprising on November 9, 1923, which has been instituted since the inception of the National Socialist regime, began yesterday for this year at midday, with an assembly of detachments of all the National Socialist formations at Munich's three graveyards, where they mounted guard over the coffins containing the bodies of the 15 victims of the November uprising.

The bodies, mostly buried in Munich, have been exhumed for final burial to-day in temples of honour which have been specially built for this purpose in the "Kriegsplatz," one of Munich's principal squares.

Last night the coffins lay in state in the Feldherrn hall, in front of which the 16 people were killed in a collision with the Government forces 12 years ago. At 8 p.m. a procession started from each cemetery, conveying the coffins on gun-carriages to the Feldherrn hall in the centre of the city, where they arrived at midnight, evaluated on the steps of the hall by Herr Hitler's deputy and the chief leaders of the various party formations.

A few minutes later Herr Hitler arrived to pay his last respects to his dead comrades, after having previously addressed the old guard and relatives of the fallen in the historic party meeting-place, the Roeggenbrau tavern. — Trans-Ocean Service.

VERY GOOD GATE EXPECTED FROM POPPY DAY GAME

South China "B" have been triumphant this season by the inclusion of Leung In-chai, at right-back, and Lee Shek-yai, on the left-wing, while they have retained the majority of last year's players.

The Athletic are certain to be led by Ho Ka-keung, but will sadly miss "Drizzle" Chan from the inside-left position.

Chin Ah-fai As Pivot

Ch'u Ah-fai will probably come down from Canton to fill the pivotal position, while the rest of the team is likely to be as last week with, perhaps, a few changes in the attack.

In the other First Division clash the East Lancers should secure the points from Stonecutters, who are, however, gradually improving.

Second Division

A good game is anticipated in the Second Division where the Fusiliers and the East Lancers clash. Both are at the top of the table and the result will go a long way towards determining the ultimate champions.

CLUB GIVE SOUTH
CHINA A FRIGHT

Bickford and Forrow proved a splendid left-wing, and Ernie Strange was a bustling leader, but the right-wing failed to settle down well and positioned badly, causing many quite useful passes to be wasted.

With South China's rearguard rather below form, the halves were forced to play farther back and could give but infrequent assistance to the attack. Lee Tin-sang was far from sure in his kicking, while Tam relied more on his headwork than footwork in clearing.

Leung Wing-chui and Lau Hing-choi were two hard-working halves, tackling quickly and distributing very effectively.

Lee Well Looked After

Lee Wai-tong was not the usual forceful and dominating leader, being constantly hampered by the close marking of his opponents, and the other forwards continually plying him with the ball, with which he had few chances of breaking through, much of the sting was taken out of the Chinese attack.

Tao and Tay Quee-ling were two very fast wingers, and both scored over many perfect centres, the latter being particularly accurate with his corner-kicking.

The game opened with a series of attacks by the Club, and a quick pass from Bickford to Ernie Strange, who passed across the goalmouth to Fowler, looked a certain goal, but the Club right-winger completely missed the ball!

With Gilchrist on the slow side, South China pressed home a long attack on their left, and a quick shot by Tay missed by inches. At the other end, Forrow sent across the field to Fowler, who headed back to Ernie Strange, and the centre-forward, after cleverly tricking Tam, shot well, but Wong Wing saved and cleared.

Two corners in succession, taken by Tay, saw Rodger effect brilliant clearances, and the Club custodian saved from Ip Pak-wah and Lee Wai-tong in splendid style during five hectic minutes of heavy pressure by South China.

Lee Opens Scoring

Then Lee Wai-tong, receiving from Tay, took careful aim from 15 yards, and placed the ball just inside the post, giving Rodger no possible chance, and placing South China in the lead. In the next minute Tay burst through and cut in towards goal, but Rodger again saved well from point-blank range.

Early in the second half Elliott sent Ernie Strange clean through, but the latter's shot went yards over the bar. A long shot from 80 yards by Forrow gave Wong Wing a fright, but he just managed to push out from under the bar.

A sudden breakaway by Lee Wai-tong looked certain to end in a goal, but, when five yards from Rodger and in the act of shooting, Hill flung himself at the ball and cleared it. In the next minute however, Lee scored and flashed the ball past Rodger with a lightning left-foot drive.

The Club kept up their attack, although in arrears, and a fine pass down the line to Bickford by Gilchrist gave the left-winger a clear run, and from his perfectly placed control Fowler headed a splendid goal.

Club:—Rodger; Hill and S. Strange; Robertson, Skinner and Gilchrist; Fowler, Elliott, E. Strange, Forrow and Bickford.

S. China "A":—Wong Wing; Lee Tin-sang and Tam Kong-pak; Leung Wing-hui, Wong Mo-shuh, and Lau Hing-choi; Tay Kwai-hing, Chan Tak-fai, Lee Wai-tong, Ip Pak-wah and Tay Quee-ling.

P.C.). Warr also won the singles title by beating Wilson.

The R.A.S.C. (Col. Morris, Capt. Welch, S. S. M. Waley, Cpl. D. Bland, Sgt. Everett and L/Cpl. Vaughan) won the League by beating the Lincolns (Kowloon winners) by 6 sets to 3 in the play-off.

ANTI-MUTSAI
SOCIETYPast Year's Work
ReviewedCONTINUAL FIGHT BEING WAGED

A review of the work of the Anti-Muttsai Society of Hong Kong during the past year was given at the fourteenth annual general meeting held at the Chinese Y.W.C.A., Bonham Road, last night. The report showed that while much good has been done in conjunction with the Mutsai Registration Department of the Secretariat of Chinese Affairs, much more requires to be done before the evil is finally eradicated.

In the absence of Mr. J. D. Bush, the Hon. English Secretary, Mr. S. S. Fu gave a summary of the cases dealt with by the Society last year. At the beginning of September the Society wrote to the Government, urging the necessity of enforcing the registration of all adopted daughters, and the Society was informed that the question was being carefully considered and watched by the Government, and that if it should be proved that registration of adopted daughters was necessary to prevent evasion of the Mutsai Ordinance, the necessary steps would be taken.

Mr. Wong Sun-kam, the Chairman, said that the noble task which they had begun must be continued with the same courage and determination to a successful end, and he felt sure that the day was not far distant when all muttsai in the colony and China would disappear. He regretted to state that many people were still keeping muttsai in the guise of adopted daughters, and he felt sure that with the assistance of the Government this would be stopped.

They were not alone in their work, for similar societies had been formed in Fokien and in Amoy, where the Society have a compound where over 150 muttsai are fed and housed.

New Measures Required

Mr. M. S. Mak, one of the original members, said that to abolish this evil it was necessary to take new and forceful measures. Besides approaching the local Government with regard to adopted daughters, the Society had written to the Minister of Education in Nanking, asking him to introduce into schools text books on the evils of keeping muttsai and expressing the hope that through the medium of education it would be possible to root out the tradition of keeping muttsai. He urged every member to continue the work of the Society by propaganda and by every means in his power.

General Committee

The following were elected to the General Committee, from whom the officials and the different sub-committees will be chosen:—

Messrs. Wong Sun-kam, Wong See-kin, Li Ka-fan, Dr. Sin Lok-san, Mr. Vat Lok-hin, Mr. Wong See-ko, Mr. Wong Sit-hing, Mrs. To See-ling, Mrs. Sin Tak-ling, Messrs. Kwong Yut-suen, Li Kam-yam, Ho Sam-yin, Cheung Po-ai, Wu Yee-ting, Fu Sai-chi, Wong Kam Yik, Cheung Kat-ting, Yeung Shui-choon, Lam Chak-shan, Wong Tak-choi, Mak Mei-yan, Cheuk Yan-ko, Lo Cheuk-fan, Tso Kong, Ngan Kwan-ye, Cheung Tsang-sung, Dr. Fook Wing-kun, Miss Ng Man-chee and Miss Kwok Fung-hing.

TRIBUTE PAID TO LATE MR. JOHNSTON

Boyes made a fine save a few moments later when Ridley sent in a hard ground shot through a crowd of players around the goal, only for Boyes to make a quick dive, gather and clear.

The Lincolns again took the lead after 20 minutes, Malpas taking a pass from Ridley to score with a hard right-footed drive which Boyes did not see.

The Lincolns attacked immediately on the resumption and Boyes made two remarkable saves in the first minute. The Lincolns, however, scored their third goal in the third minute of play, Malpas taking a long pass from Baldry to hit the roof of the net with a fast rising shot.

The last goal of the match, the Lincolns' fourth, was scored after 25 minutes in the second half, and was easily the best goal of the match. Clayton sent a long lobb right across the goalmouth and Baldry dashed in to score with a first-time left-footed drive.

HONG KONG AND THE NEW TERRITORIES. — No. 180.

A VISIT was paid to Shataukok on the afternoon of yesterday week and, considering that we were in Kowloon at 2.30 p.m., the afternoon was very successful. Whilst one of the three of us climbed a hill in order to take a photograph of Ng Tung Shan in the distance the remaining two wandered slowly along the southern-line of Starling Inlet. Herons and Crows

THERE is a small island at the end of the Inlet and on the shore of this we noticed an Eastern Grey Heron standing. This is a much larger bird than the Reef Heron and is very similar to the English Heron. This was the first occasion on which I had seen this species at Shataukok though I have seen several, on more than one occasion, in the Ping Shan district. Later we saw a pair of South-East China Jungle Crows settle on this same island. This is the only completely black crow in the Colony. Still later we saw a pair of Collared Crows in flight; they are easily distinguished by their white collar. From the hill which he had climbed my friend saw a second Eastern Grey Heron in company with an Eastern Great Egret—a winter migrant. One Chinese Pond Heron was seen, but no others of this family. (A few days previously at Kam Tin both Chinese Pond Herons and Little Egrets were noticed—very late in the year for the latter species, which is a summer bird).

Winter Visitors
OF the winter visitors the three common Waxbills, White-faced, Streak-eyed and Grey Wagtail, were all seen and also the two Plovers, Richard's and the Eastern Tree Plover. A Stonechat, a Japanese Robin Flycatcher, and an Eastern Blue Rock Thrush (not in adult plumage), were noticed, all winter visitors. The birds of prey were well represented. A single Harrier was noticed patrolling the rice fields near the road to Shataukok. It was probably a Marsh Harrier, as this is the only species up to the present recorded from the Territories and so far this species has only been recorded from the Ping Shan district where it is a regular winter visitor. In the air above us near the sea were seen together a pair of Japanese Buzzards and a Peregrine Falcon and over the inlet a Black-eared Kite, the common local species. Kingfishers

THREE or four individuals of the beautiful Black-capped Kingfisher were seen, three together, in one district. This species is a summer visitor, but a few individuals or families stay for the winter near the coast, where they subsist on a diet of crabs. A black cap, white collar, vivid blue back, white breast and orange abdomen, together with a red bill, are the distinguishing features of this species. Two of the White-breasted Kingfishers were also seen; rather more individuals of this species stay for the winter. A maroon head and greenish blue back serve to distinguish this from the other large species. Two or three Little Kingfishers were also observed.

A Chinese White-breasted Water-hon flew into a tree when it heard us coming—surely a strange roosting place—and my friend, who had by now rejoined us, doubted my identification, so we tried to induce it to leave cover, but without success. When I threw in a stone it clucked, (thus showing its affinity to a hen!), but made no attempt to fly to water. Praying Mantids

THIS insect, related to the Grasshopper and Cockroach, might quite as aptly be called the Preying Mantid, for it is a carnivore. I noticed one this week which held in its first pair of legs the remains of a hornet. It had already consumed the thorax and was holding the abdomen, keeping it in hand for supper, no doubt. This insect has the power, to a certain extent, of changing its colour, or so it seems, for mantids of various hues of green and brown may be seen. I saw a large green one on the following morning.

AIR AND UNDERSEA FORD RECORDS

Starts After Four Days
Under Water

INSTANT ENGINE RESPONSE
ONE MILE UP IN AIR

Now Ford V-8 cars hold both the aerial and the submarine records for quick starting.

Recently an aeroplane took off with a Ford swung between its landing wheels. A mile up, where the temperature was zero, the motor was started instantly. That is the aerial record; now for the submarine!

For four long days, recently, a Ford V-8 car was immersed in the black, icy waters of the Delaware river in Philadelphia, when the ferryboat Cape May was rammed and sunk by the British steamship London Corporation. The ferry had just left its pier when the crash came. It was 96 hours before the salvage crew lifted the Ford V-8 out of the hulk.

Yet when its ignition was switched on and its starter-button pressed, the engine responded immediately and the car was driven off under its own power.

"INTRODUCTORY HISTORY"

Valuable Text-book
For Local Use

NEW EDITION PUBLISHED

The complaint has often been made that History is the Cinderella of many Hong Kong schools. This charge, were it true, would carry at least some points of comfort. For the subject of the fairy tale, however humble her position, did at any rate perform many practical duties. Her dress was drab and unlovely; but it was the dress of a working girl—with none of the useless frills which beautified those of her more fortunate step-sisters.

Unfortunately, the analogy does not go as far as that. For History, as taught in many schools, is not only humble and drab, but useless. The fault lies largely in the lack of suitable text-books. Many are used in local schools which are thoroughly unsuited to local needs. They have been written for English or American children and present History from their points of view. Their language too, is unsuited to Chinese children, for either it is too involved or, if the language is more simple, the ideas are too elementary.

"An Introductory History" by W. L. Handyside, M. A., B. Sc., (Newspaper Enterprise Ltd.) was in its earlier editions an attempt to remedy these faults, and earned unstinted praise from the many who used it. The most recent edition, just published, is a distinct improvement on the earlier ones. The whole book has been completely revised and brought up-to-date. More attractively bound, it is also more liberally illustrated with pictures and with maps which, have the advantage of being specially drawn for their purpose.

Practical Value

History teaching is useless unless it has an end outside itself. In these days of crowded curricula it can only be excused on grounds of its practical value. Unless it can be identified with everyday life it is nothing more than an examination obstacle.

Mr. Handyside's interesting little book fulfils this practical purpose in as far as any text-book can. It amply serves, as the author, in his preface, intends it to, as "a connecting link between the history of the past and the more systematic study of historical fact which points in the direction of the Social Sciences."

On the whole, a book which can be confidently recommended to all local schools for either middle or senior classes.

FABULOUS ANIMALS OF CHINA

FOUR THAT CONTROL ITS DESTINY

FIRST, THE DRAGON, CHIEF OF SCALY ANIMALS

(By PHYLLIS JUBY)

THE ancient books of China contain accounts of the "Four Fabulous Animals" which control the destiny of the Empire. There is the dragon, chief of the scaly animals, which presides over authority; the phoenix, the chief of the feathery animals, which presides over virtue; the unicorn, chief of the hairy animals, which presides over literature; the tortoise, chief of the shelly animals, which presides over divination.

The dragon, standing for everything terrible, imposing and powerful, has a very varied significance in China; it plays its part in religion, superstition, art, science and government; it permeates all phases of Chinese life, the visible and invisible, natural and supernatural, sacred and profane. It has its visible form in paintings, sculpture, architecture, in designs for jewellery, fabrics, porcelain and furniture, in decorations in temples, gardens, parks, on bridges and fountains. Invisibly it appears in love of poetry and prose, in myths and legends, in the religions of Buddha and Tao. It is the unseen force governing water, which, as Lao Tse said, "is the weakest and softest of things, yet overcomes the strongest and hardest." According to one authority, "the Celestial Dragon guards the mansions of the gods and supports them so that they do not fall. The Spiritual Dragon causes winds to blow and produces rain for the benefit of mankind." The Earth Dragon marks the courses of streams and rivers. The Dragon of Hidden Treasures watches over the wealth concealed from mortals.

Dragons and Humans
"Clouds follow the dragon, the wind follows the tiger," as the saying goes; so at the beginning of summer, when the wind comes and the rainy season is due, the dragon, which has been coiled up on the earth in a pool or a stream, ascends the sky to begin its operations. Controlling the rain, it holds in its power prosperity and peace. Usually it plays the role of a genius of benevolence, but if angered its appearance may be ominous; it may cause drought, floods, typhoons, earthquakes, pestilences or eclipses. Hence not only is the dragon to be worshipped, but also propitiated. But after many days of prayer and sacrifice the people grow impatient if the Dragon God has not remedied the ill, and there is nothing to prevent them from annoying the dragons by throwing tiger-bones into their ponds and wells or frightening them with noise. During an eclipse of the sun the people suppose the darkness to be caused by a dragon having swallowed the sun; so they rush out into the streets with drums, gongs, horns, and whistles, and create such a noise that the dragon in a fright disgorges its prey.

More than that: not many months ago the local papers told the story of how the Dragon God of Jenchiu, Honan, was actually executed for his "sin of omission" in refusing to give the countryside rain after every conceivable sacrifice had been made to him and every form of prayer offered. A delightful ideal! The Chinese, at least, have not yet made of their religion a thing of fear. A special countryside altar was built for the Dragon God at this time so that he could see for himself the terrible condition of the fields. A seven days vigil began, but at the end of the seven days the dust lay thicker and the sky was cloudless. A further three days of grace was granted to the Dragon God by the local magistrate. No rain fell, so the magistrate summoned the executioner and the god's head was quickly removed!

The Dragon Mirror
A mirror adorned with a coiled dragon is worshipped in order to cause rain. The aim of this magic mirror is to force the dragons to follow their images and ascend from the pools to the sky. In the tenth century A.D. an earth dragon was flogged in order to force the other unwilling dragons to ascend. We read, too, of a sick dragon, which, as a sequel to prayers recited before its den, gave a bad-smelling rain which would certainly have spoiled the crops had not a diviner discovered it in time and cured the dragon at its own request. Thereupon a fertilising rain fell.

Structurally the dragon is the same in the examples coming down from the shadowy past as it is in those of modern artists. According to a Chinese description: "It has the head of a camel, the horns of a deer, the ears of an ox, the eyes of a hare, the neck of a snake, the stomach of a large cockle, the scales of a carp, the claws of a hawk, the paws of a tiger." It has eighty-one scales, or nine times nine; for nine symbolises Yang, the active male principle of nature, and nine is the extreme odd or lucky number, the dragon possessing all the luck that humans covet. Its voice is like the booming of a gong; its breath is fire, fog or rain, but is generally converted into spirals of clouds of beautiful pattern that are said to be the manifestation of the active cosmic forces.

The Taoist Belief
In contact with Taoism it became possessed of the knowledge of magic which enabled it to defy all physical law. It could render itself visible or invisible, swell to the dimensions of heaven or shrink to the size of a silkworm, gallop over the clouds or crouch in the abyss. It could also assume the shape of men, women, animals or objects. Liu Tsung Yuen, a poet of the Tang dynasty, tells how a dragon which was punished by the Emperor of Heaven fell down upon the earth in the shape of a woman, spreading a brilliant light. There she stayed for seven days, and then, after drinking some water, her breath became a cloudy vapour, she was changed into a white dragon and disappeared into the sky.

Another dragon assumed the shape of a tree. A woman passing by touched the tree with her hand and soon afterwards gave birth to ten male children. The dragon later appeared in its real form from the water and nine of the boys ran away in terror, but the tenth climbed upon his dragon-father's neck, and in the years to come it was he who was made king of the land.

In the Hsia dynasty, it is related, a palace maiden was charged into a fearful dragon and then, upon reassuming her human form, she became a very beautiful woman who devoured men.

Dragons Of To-day

There are many ideas about the origin of the dragon. Some claim that it is purely an imaginary creature evolved from the activities of the storm, the coiling, fleeing lightning and the booming of the thunder. When black and yellow clouds covered the sky and the thunder and the lightning raged, the ancient Chinese said, like those of to-day: "The dragons are fighting; look at their blood spreading over the sky." Others believe it to have been a real creature, which as much as a million years ago coexisted with man. There are found to-day on the island of Komodo, in the Eastern Archipelago, strange reptiles known as Komodo dragons, which, some believe, may possibly be the origin of the Chinese dragon legends. This Komodo dragon, which lives in caves, grows to about 16 feet in length, has a large forked tongue, long curved teeth and, generally, a most ferocious aspect. It lives on horses, deer and wild pigs and an occasional carabao. Normally it runs on all four legs, but when fighting—to which it is not in the

CONTRACT BRIDGE

INTERVENING BIDS

(By Lieut.-Col. H. M. BEASLEY)

It is well to emphasize the fact that every bid you make at Contract should have some objective, and there is no use in making an intervening bid unless either (1) you are trying to hinder the opponents from exchanging information; (2) showing your partner what to lead in the event of your being left on the defensive; or (3) trying to achieve a part score or game.

Before you decide to make an intervening bid, there are certain important factors which have an influence on the action you should take. These are:

- (1) Vulnerability. Are you vulnerable or are the opponents vulnerable?
- (2) Have you a part score or have the opponents a part score?
- (3) Can you overcall at the one level or must you overcall at the two or three level?
- (4) Your position at the table. Are you the first to speak or the last?

As a general guide it is as well to refrain from making an overcall—if vulnerable—unless you can see a very good chance of making in your own hand a definite number of tricks not more than two short of your contract, or—if invulnerable—three short of your contract.

Hands on which you can overcall are (a) a moderate hand, (b) a fairly good hand, and (c) a strong hand.

As a general standard for making an overcall invulnerable, at the one level, you are justified in bidding with a hand which contains a little less than the requirements necessary for an opening bid. If you have to overcall at the two level, you should certainly hold a five-card suit, and a hand which would justify an opening bid.

Spade—Q 5 3 2
Heart—A J 9 6 5
Diamond—6 3
Club—10 7

It is better to pass on a hand of this nature, for it is unlikely that the opponents will make a game in Spades, and unless your partner holds a fairly good hand it is improbable that you will get very far with a bid of two Hearts. Naturally, if the opponents have a part score of 70, this factor will influence you, but do not forget that if you are vulnerable you may come in for a very unpleasant double.

On the other hand, if your opponent opens with a bid of one Spade and you are not vulnerable,

WORLD PRODUCTION OF NICKEL
Canada Leads The Field
INCREASED FIGURES FOR LAST YEAR

Ottawa.
Canada, as producer of nearly 90 per cent. of the world's nickel, is keenly interested in the increasing world use of this metal. According to a study made by Canadian trade and commerce officials of the 1934 production and delivery of world nickel shipments in all forms, it amounted to 122,000,000 pounds, as compared with 96,000,000 pounds in the previous year.

Of the several countries producing nickel in 1934, Canada was far to the front with 64,344 short tons. New Caledonia followed with 5,500 tons, India with 1,300 tons, while Soviet Russia entered the production field for the first time with 951 tons. Greece and Norway, listed as producers in 1933, were not in the 1934 list.

The industrial centres whose economic recovery was the most marked naturally registered the greatest gains in consumption. The demand for nickel in the United Kingdom reached an all-time peak in 1934; nickel deliveries were about equally divided between the North American continent and the rest of the world.

Automobile Requirements
The automobile industry continues to be the largest single consumer of nickel, using about thirty per cent. of the total consumption in Canada and the United States. Considerable quantities are used in the equipment for oil refining. Pure nickel, as well as nickel-clad steel, is used for the construction of equipment to make caustic soda.

Ethiopia issued ten million coins of pure nickel, becoming the 28th country in the world to use pure nickel coinage. The amount of nickel going into light aluminium alloys and the use of the metal in stainless steel continues to increase. Reuter.

Others tell more vague and fanciful tales. Fu-Hai, the legendary founder of China, was rewarded by being transformed into a dragon of supreme power. First he became a water dragon, the symbol of a scholar; then a land dragon, the symbol of a statesman; then a dragon of the skies, insignia of the Emperor, the Son of Heaven. (To be continued)

"SLEEPING BEAUTY" OF ILLINOIS

American Doctors Puzzled

New York.
The "Sleeping Beauty" of Illinois, Patricia Maguire, recently reached her 136th day of continuous sleep.

Patricia does not seem to have suffered any ill effects from her prolonged coma. She seems younger now than when she first became ill. Her youthful appearance has puzzled the doctors.

She has also gained weight on the semi-solid food on which she is being fed. Every day her muscles are massaged to prevent them from being atrophied.

Before Patricia fell into her stupor she worked as a typist in a Chicago office.

One day she came home saying she was feeling drowsy. Then she became unconscious.

From that time she has never recovered.

OLYMPIC GAMES IN GERMANY

Valuable Railway Concessions

Berlin, Yesterday.

All the participants in next year's Olympic Games as well as foreign visitors wishing to attend the games will be granted considerable reductions in fares on the German railways, according to an announcement made here to-day.

All active athletes, trainers, attendants and members of foreign Olympic committees, official press representatives and their relatives will be allowed a 50 per cent. rebate in all classes and free transport of their personal luggage and sporting equipment, up to a total weight of 75 kilograms.

The reductions will be valid for journeys to and from the place in the Bavarian Alps where the Olympic Winter Sports are taking place from February 6 to 16; Berlin, where the 11th Olympic Games will be held between August 1 and 16; and Kiel, where the Olympic Regattas are scheduled for August 4 to 15.—Trans-Ocean Service.

FRIDAY LUCK DAY FOR ITALIANS

According to an as yet unconfirmed message from Harrar, Ras Meza, commander-in-chief of the southern front, has now begun a counter-offensive, marching with more than 100,000 men along the Dacheba River to Wafra, in Italian Somaliland.

STRATEGIC IMPORTANCE

Asmara: Italian military quarters attach greater strategic importance to the occupation of Gorahai, which was effected by an Askari detachment of Colonel Malotti, than to the fall of Makalle, because the first-named city is a most important junction of numerous caravan roads.

It is pointed out that on the southern front mainly native troops, both regulars and irregulars, are being employed owing to the climatic reasons, and that in contradistinction from the methods used on the northern front or the Somaliland front, of a distinctly "colonial character," the operations are being carried out by relatively small detachments using surprise tactics.

On the northern front, on the other hand, large units are advancing methodically, keeping in constant contact with each other. The direction in which General Graziani's troops are now advancing shows clearly that the Italians intend to effect a junction between the troops operating from Eritrea and the Somaliland forces.—Trans-Ocean Service.

VIOLENT ATTACKS ON HERRIOT FRENCH PREMIER INTERVENES

APPEAL FOR NATIONAL UNITY IN CRISIS

Paris, Yesterday.

The press attacks on M. Herriot for having appeared at Lyons last Sunday on the same platform as a Communist speaker, whom he supported enthusiastically in a Franco-Russian demonstration of friendship, have become so violent that M. Laval has been constrained to intervene on behalf of his Cabinet colleague.

Certain papers of the extreme Right, notably the Echo de Paris and the Gringoire, are particularly outspoken, the former calling M. Herriot "France's Public Enemy No. 1," while the latter asserts that he is doing his utmost behind the scenes to obtain the expulsion of M. Eberlin, the Soviet Russian agent arrested recently at Strasbourg on a charge of espionage. M. Herriot preferring to see Eberlin released for fear that his revelations might prove compromising to him and certain prominent Left-wing politicians.

GRAVE SITUATION

M. Laval told pressmen yesterday that a Cabinet crisis at this juncture might have grave results. "Certain allegations," he said, "made by the press aim at splitting the Government into two opposing camps. I consider it my duty to declare that Edouard Herriot is now, as ever, working with me loyally and trustworthily to discharge the hard and difficult tasks with which Parliament has entrusted us."

"At this moment, when unity is more necessary than ever, I recall the urgent appeal I directed to all Frenchmen last September, to do nothing that might disturb this unity of purpose. I deplore all attempts to drive a wedge into the Government or to weaken its prestige. The members of all the parties must pull together to lessen the difficulties we are facing." —Trans-Ocean Service.

Many Chinese leaders, especially those educated in the United States, are also in favour of close collaboration between the United States and China, but the "apologetic isolation" policy of the Washington Government dampens the ardour of many enthusiasts for American support against Japan.

Great Britain is also relied upon by many Chinese leaders as a friend in need, as her investments in China are seriously affected by Japanese trade and political expansion.

Chinese goodwill to Britain is shown by Nankin's adoption of the League sanctions, while Britain re-innocates by instructing her bankers in China to comply with the new monetary measure of the Ministry of Finance.

WEATHER REPORT

The anticyclone is stationary over north-west and central China, pressure being highest over the middle Yangtze Valley. A ridge of moderately high pressure extends north-eastward to Japan. A depression is moving east across Manchuria. North-east winds, moderate; fine, was the forecast for to-day, as issued by the Royal Observatory yesterday evening.

Some of the Eritrean native cavalrymen shown in this picture are loyal supporters of Italy and in the vanguard of the invasion of Ethiopia.

Pack Of Hounds In London's Streets

UNIQUE SPECTACLE

London, Yesterday.

A Pageant of Agriculture and Country Life formed the central feature of the Lord Mayor of London's show to-day. One of the exhibits in the procession which preceded the new Lord Mayor on his journey to make his statutory declaration of office at the Law Courts was a complete pack of hounds from the Old Berkeley hunt. Probably never before has such a spectacle been seen in London streets.—British Wireless Service.

The Shanghai question will clearly require close examination before, and careful handling when, it is raised, but its obvious difficulties and possible dangers will only be multiplied by neglect.—Reuter.

the high range of mountains in front of Amba Alagi, where it is expected that the Abyssinians will make the first serious resistance. Ras Kassa will be stationed in this region with an army estimated at 50,000, and consequently heavy fighting is not expected until the fourth stage of the advance, which is not likely until after Christmas. When and if Amba Alagi is captured all the Tigrean territory reaching as far south as Lake Ashangi will belong to Italy, as well as the corresponding position of Danakil province.
